Meetings of the lodge are held monthly at the home of the various members.

Margaret O'Brien Seen Here Monday

A picture depicting life on a Wisconsin farm, "Our Vines Have Tender Grapes," comes to the Cartier for Monday and Tuesday.

It speaks softly of love and work and neighborliness. Centering chiefly in the reactions of a seven-year-old girl to the shape of the world about her, it is warm in sentiment, slower in pace, and rich in scenic beauty.

The youngster, Selma Jacobson, is played by Margaret O'Brien, whose excellent performances sets the pace for a cast of skilled veterans, among them Edward G. Robinson, Agnes Moorehead and Morris Carnovsky. To round out the picture with a love story are James Craig and Frances Gifford, as the local editor and the school teacher who thinks she prefers life in Milwaukee but changes her mind.

The screenplay Dalton Trumbo wrote from the novel, "For Our Vines Have

"Canyon City" Comes To Cartier Friday

"Canyon City" starring Don "Red" Barry, Wally Vernon and Helen Talbot, comes to the Cartier for Friday and Saturday.

Barry, a power company investigator, posing as the Nevada Kid, and his partner, Wally, are framed for the murder of Judge Gleason. They escape jail, turn the tables on the crooked power company representative, Morgan Conway, and his banker henchman, proving the power company really wanted to give the ranchers a square deal.

Morgan's efforts to have the ranchers evicted from their property through bank foreclosure, so he and the banker can buy the properties and water right for a song, are thwarted by Barry, but not before the dam is blown up twice and a fake hold-up to steal the rancher's funds for repair of the dam is staged at Morgan's instigation.

Conway is top villain, aided by Emmett Vogan LeRoy Mason and others. Wally Vernon gets some good laughs across, while Helen Talbot does a neat job as a Western heroine, who can not only look and act beautiful, but also can ride a horse.

Twinkle Watts plays a child orphaned in the gunplay.

"People Are Funny" Coming To Palace

Radio fans who have been splitting their sides at NBC's unique audience participation program, "People Are Funny," will now be able to see Art Linkletter and his gang make merry when Paramount's movie version comes Monday to the Palace Theatre.

The picture stars Jack Haley, Helen Walker, Rudy Vallee, Ozzie Nelson, Philip Reed and Frances Langford. Reports indicating there's enough radio and screen talent in the cast to provide a thoroughly enjoyable time for all.

This is definitely, according to reviewers, a sit-back-and-relax film bouquet of choice entertainment picked to please any and every audience. By using a laugh meter during one hundred broadcasts of "People Are Funny", Producers Pine and Thomas selected the five most riotous stunts and incorporated them into the film. Seven tuneful numbers are rendered, including the ever-popular "I'm in the Mood for Love", sung by Frances Langford.

The story concerns the high-handed shenanigans of Helen Walker, Ozzie Nelson and Phil Reed, an ingenious threesome out to make money on a program produced by Jack Haley, a talented but unworried lad who falls prey to the Walker wives. In one of the choicest parts of his career, Haley runs the gamut of a singing-acting-dancing performance all rolled into one.

Though Rudy Vallee sings his own vocal arrangement of "Alouetta," he is seen, for the most part, as a stuffy, stodgy radio executive. Ozzie Nelson, erstwhile bandleader, plays a straight role for the first time in his Hollywood career. Melodious vocalizing is contributed by Bob Graham, up-and-coming crooner recruited from the "Duffy's Tavern" air show, while additional numbers are offered by that spectacular San Francisco quartette, "The Vagabonds."

According to preview commentaries, "People Are Funny" is exceptionally diverting film fare — fun for young and old alike.

Abbott and Costello Shine In New Movie

A laugh-laden, tune-filled picture, "Bud Abbott and Lou Costello in Hollywood" will be seen at the Cartier on Wednesday and Thursday of next week.

The madcap team of Bud Abbott and Lou Costello level their side-splitting lamppostery at the hallowed traditions of the film industry.

Broadly burlesquing their way through the film story as a pair of barbers turned actors' agents, the comedians have a field day as they run riot in a Hollywood studio.

Frances Rafferty, whose youthful talents and sparkling personality brightened "Mrs. Parkington" and "The Hidden Eye" plays the feminine lead as a glamorous movie actress.

The new comedy introduces to screen audiences the new singing discovery, Robert Stanton, who plays the slightly biographical role of a singer making his screen debut. Stanton is the brother of radio and screen Dick Haymes, and has recently been honorably discharged from the Army.

Others in the cast of the comedy are Jean Porter, as a flirtatious menu-curier, and Warner Anderson in the role of an agent. "Rags" Ragland collabs with the pair of comics in one of the picture's most hilarious sequences.

A complete musical score was written by top tunesmiths Ralph Blane and Hugh Martin, composers of the popular "Trolley Song."

Among the new tunes are "As I Remember You," "I Hope the Band Keeps Playing" and "Fun on the Wonderful Midway."

Also on the same program is "Tiger Woman", a fast-paced, breezy romance.

Tiring of C and K rations, a private bagged a brace of chicken, was on his way to the mess when he was intercepted by the chaplain.

"Where did you get those chickens?" asked the chaplain.

"Shot 'em, sir."

That was a slip. The chaplain was mentally thumbing the rule books as he repeated, dubiously "Shot them, eh?" The private quickly amended: "Yes, sir, shot 'em in self-defence."
