

Jennifer Jones Seen In Palace Comedy

Riding pell-mell through an English village on the handlebars of a messenger boy's bicycle is not the way moviegoers think of serious-minded Jennifer Jones, so long associated with her Academy Award portrayal of the visonair "Bernadette." But, with a mob-cap on her head and a wrench in her hand, Jennifer is cutting capers as an uninhibited irrepressible parlor maid with a yen to be a lady plumber. She is "Cluny" in Ernst Lubitsch's sprightly film version of Margery Sharp's rollicking best-seller, "Cluny Brown," in which she is starred with Charles Boyer, and which opens Sunday midnight at the Palace.

"Cluny" is unpredictable and so is Jennifer. She is certain to shock her fans when they get their initial glimpse of her totting an English journeyman plumber's kit to say nothing of when she gets a little tipsy and imitates a Persian cat for her screen vis-a-vis, Boyer.

"Different" Story For Joan Fontaine

An altogether different kind of love story is told in "From This Day Forward," playing at the Palace today, Friday and Saturday, starring Joan Fontaine, playing opposite a newcomer, Mark Stevens, whose performance is captivating, in harmony with that of the star.

Romance, drama and comedy are depicted in this realistic slice of life. It is a heartening demonstration of how a young married couple can ride safely through the modern trials and tribulations which, too often wreck people's lives.

We pick up the young couple, Susan and Bill Cummings, as she is on her way to the doctor to confirm a happy suspicion, and he, ready for discharge from the army, is bound for the U.S. Employment Office to look for a job. While filling out his form, his mind goes back to 1937 when he and Susan were engaged.

Bill wants security for Susan before they marry, but the girl, confident in the quality of their love, overrules him and they are married.

Thereafter, their love is severely tested. Bill goes through the usual hirings and firings, and Susan is sometimes the sole breadwinner.

All these trials are weathered. There is the time Bill has to go to war — that is weathered too.

And now he is back. He is looking for a job, but he has no news for the future. Their love has been tested and found good. Susan is going to have a baby, and the world looks rosy.

Plenty of Drama Broadway Feature

Hard-hitting melodrama and sweeping romance sound the key-note for Warner Bros. newest film drama "Her Kind of Man," which is playing today and Friday at the Broadway, co-starring Dane Clark, Janis Paige and Zachary Scott.

Based on an original story by Charles Hoffman and James V. Kern the screenplay written by Gordon Kahn and Leopold Atlas, presents the exciting life of the late twenties and early thirties, just before Roosevelt

Two Comedies On Cartier Bill Tonight

Susanna Foster gets a decidedly different role when she appears in "That Night With You," a gay, sophisticated comedy musical in which she co-stars with Franchot Tone, Louise Allbritton and Davis Bruce at the Cartier Theatre. The picture is showing for the last time tonight.

On the same program is "G. I. Honeymoon," one of the most amusing comedies shown this season, featuring Gale Storm, Peter Cookson, Arline Judge, Jerome Cowan and Frank Jenks.

Both pictures add up to an excellent evening of laughs for those who like their entertainment on the lighter side — as who doesn't?

Trail To Vengeance Is Cartier Western

In "Trail to Vengeance," appearing at the Cartier on Friday and Saturday, two cowboys arrive in Twin Forks to find that the brother of one of them has been murdered, supposedly by a rival rancher.

The bank, which holds a mortgage on the dead man's property, is about to foreclose. The daughter of the accused rancher enlists the aid of the cowboys to prove that her father is innocent, and that the president of the bank is the real killer.

The latter, together with his fellow-conspirators, is brought to justice.

Mr. Joyce stated that he had been asked to take part in one of the show games by Paquette and when he refused Paquette had told him to move on out of the road then.

They had bickered for a moment and Joyce had left and begun making a cigarette when Paquette ran into him from behind.

Joyce stated he turned then and was struck twice in the face by Paquette, sustaining a black eye and cut lip.

Two Men Get Year Apiece For Assaulting Constable

Crowd's Unwillingness To Support Law And Order Is Cited In Evidence

Alme Mousseau, 23 of 322 Mountjoy St. South and Paul Pilon, 23, of 26 Windsor Ave., charged with the assault of Police Constable Harold Browne, were sentenced to one year each by Acting Magistrate S. C. Platus in police court here on Tuesday afternoon.

Both men, Pilon still bearing marks of the injuries received in the fifteen-minute fray in the early morning of June 16, entered pleas of guilty, with A. Wetmore acting as their defense.

Giving evidence in the case Constable Browne stated he had first seen Mousseau and Pilon in front of the Paradise Grill, yelling and swearing. He told the men to go home, he said, and was assured by them that they would do so.

However, they continued cutting up as they made their way down Third Ave., he stated, and so he followed them, stopping once to answer the questions of a passer-by.

When the men reached Balsam St., Constable Browne stated they had dodged behind the blind man's store on that corner and but for being informed of where they were by a pedestrian he would have passed them by.

When he told them to go home for the second time, Constable Browne said that Mousseau had used profanity and called him stupid. Mousseau had run up the laneway then and the constable prepared to take Pilon's name without giving chase to Mousseau because he knew the man.

Mousseau returned on the run while he was talking to Pilon, he stated, and struck him in the face. Pilon followed up on the attack with his feet, knocking the constable to the ground where he was pummelled by feet on every part of the body.

The constable went on to say that he had used his billy, flashlight and handcuffs as a means of defending himself and when he had finally got the upper hand he had asked for help from the large crowd which had gathered, and save for one very kicked, no one moved. He had to continue the fight himself, he said.

As for the crowd, the constable stated they were very hostile and had favored the two men to the extent of urging them to "put the boots to him."

"The fight terminated when Mousseau was stopped from fleeing by two bullets over his head and Pilon was subdued in the laneway by Constable Browne after the arrival of Constable J. Handley.

As a result of the fracas Pilon was hospitalized for 17 days. Mousseau suffered several cuts to the face and Constable Browne was in receipt of scratches and abrasions to his body.

Defense counsel A. Wetmore asked for leniency in sentencing the man saying they had been too drunk to know what they were up to and because of their army service and previous good records.

As for Pilon, Mr. Wetmore stated that with all respect to Constable Browne he had done a thorough job on Pilon and that Pilon's injuries now necessitated an operation for a fracture of the skull. However, he felt that if the arrests had been made when they were found at the Paradise Grill the affair would have been avoided.

Crown Attorney S. A. Caldbick termed the fracas as the most serious assault ever to take place in Timmins and asked for the maximum penalty of two years for each man.

Mr. Caldbick went on to say that if Constable Browne had not been able to handle himself, the attack could easily have resulted in his death.

"If this case is treated too lightly," he said, "it will serve to break down law and order in Timmins."

Moth Mousseau and Pilon stated they had drunk to excess and while Mousseau had faint recollections of the happenings, Pilon stated he had known nothing until regaining consciousness in hospital the morning after the attack.

Before passing sentence of one year in jail, Acting Magistrate S. C. Platus told Mousseau and Pilon that it was by the grace of God that their action had not resulted in the charge being of a more serious nature. He also commended Constable Browne highly for the manner in which he had handled the whole affair.

Three Times Drunk, Three Times Fined

Triple trouble was Einar Koiviniemi's lot when he appeared in police court here on Tuesday afternoon.

Four persons paid fines of $10 and costs for infractions of the highway traffic act and nine persons were assessed $1 and costs for infractions of traffic by-laws.

"There were and still are numerous requests from organizations worthy of support. We have not been able to subscribe to all, but it will be noted that we did contribute to most of those know what they were up to and because which we believed our members would have our support.

"During the war years, our efforts were naturally directed toward war-

One of the four, Jacques Jourdain, 26, of 70 Birch St. South, entered a plea of guilty to charges of disorderly conduct and was assessed $20 and costs or thirty days.
