

JUST Between OURSELVES

By Bernice Kaye

At last the curiosity of the Porcupine district has been satiated. At the very successful Kinsmen Club Sadie Hawkins Day Dance last Friday at the Riverside Pavilion that much talked about "Terror of Lower Slobovia" was unveiled. Of the quota of one allowed from that country to the U. S. A. for this year, Lena the Hyena was the one chosen by her countrymen to leave the homeland, and after getting one furtive glimpse of her, we fully understand why.

It would suffice to say that she surpassed the Three Gorgons in her repulsiveness, but for the benefit (?) of those who didn't get through the throng to view her we'll endeavour to describe the lady.

Beginning with the pleasantest things first, we'll mention that Lena's gown was of canary yellow velvet and fitted her robust figure as well as can be expected. Her ruby necklace and brooch were probably a bribe from someone to stay in seclusion, but those Kinsmen are pretty convincing fellows and persuaded her to appear at their dance.

Her bovine-like face bore a wide grimace, which displayed to the public a mouthful of large protruding teeth and full fleshy Ubangi-type lips. Yellow Gypsy earrings graced her eight-inch ears, which greatly resembled pork chops (a favourite of L'il Abner's). Great swollen eyes pierced the audience with a pitiful expression. Her brilliant red hair was arranged in bangs across the forehead, with stiff kiss curls falling about the ears.

Mayor J. Emile Brunette was the gallant fellow who unveiled Lena the Hyena. Closing his eyes and taking a deep breath he yanked off the green netting that humanely hid her from view. After his few shaky words of welcome to Lena, it was suggested by someone (a Kinsmen, undoubtedly) that he dance with her, and being a gentleman to the last, he did. Lena's hairy muscled arm surrounded the mayor and she wadded him off to the strains of Henry Keleek's music, somewhat out of tune, after what the musicians had gone through.

We've heard it mentioned about town since Mayor Brunette's brave performance in unveiling and dancing with Lena the Hyena that he is undoubtedly equal to any situation that may arise in his coming political campaign.

Kinsmen Jack Sullivan, Len Lumbe and Hugh Scanlon deserve great credit for their part in making the Sadie Hawkins Day Dance a success. Other active committee men were Don Hardy, Bill Harrison, Al Hartman, Larry Labow, Leo Charbonneau and Sam Mitchell.

Straight from Dogpatch was the costume worn by Miss Pat Martin at this memorable dance. She was the Wolf Girl, complete to her black satin scanty dress with frayed hem way above her knees, ankle and wrist bands of coyote hair, moccasins, and black wind-blown hair.

Miss Rita McCarthy was a veritable Moonbeam McSwine, with her tattered black dress, dirty smudges across her bare arms and legs, corncob pipe and all.

Two pretty Daisy Mae's, Sonja Gustavsen and Iren Demagloski, served kickapoo joy juice to the thirsty dancers. Another Daisy Mae was Miss Grace Gagne from Ansonville. The only difference in the three impersonators was that Grace's braid of blonde hair hung to her hip. She confided to us that the longest part of it belonged to her mother. Another young lady from Ansonville was garbed in typical Dogpatch style, with fetching patches on her black dress with dogs appliqued upon them — dog-patch. Very clever, we thought.

Overalls, plaid shirts (like the one worn by Pat Connelly) and straw hats lent atmosphere to the dance, as did the corsages that a lot of the fellows were sporting. Carrots, cauliflower, parsnips, fruit, onions, and even some flowers, were tied with gay ribbons to grace the laps of the lucky men.

Mr. and Mrs. Ellet Smith, 78 Lakeshore Road, entertained Mr. and Mrs. Jim McParland and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Lavallee of Noranda and Mr. Don Moore at a charming dinner party recently.

The table was delightfully set with a beautiful ecru lace cloth with a centrepiece of pansies. Mrs. Smith is reputed for being an excellent hostess, particularly for her cooking. She served a delectable fruit cocktail, chicken-a-la-king, vegetable salad, and a cherry upside-down cake terminated the dinner pleasantly.

Mrs. Morris Sax was hostess at a charming farewell dinner held in honor of Mrs. E. W. Gladstone, who is leaving shortly to take up residence in Toronto. The dinner party was held in the McIntyre Lounge. A goodly number of Mrs. Gladstone's friends were in attendance and all expressed regret that she was leaving Timmings. Following the dinner an enjoyable social evening was held at the home of Mrs. Sax, 61 Toke St.

The annual parochial supper of the congregation of Notre Dame de Lourdes church was held on Sunday evening in the church basement from 5 to 9 p.m.

The supper was an outstanding success, for which the ladies of the parish who sponsored it were highly praised. They served over 400 people a delicious meal, cafeteria style, with chicken being the main course.

The supper opened a three-day drive by the parish in aid of the building fund, and proved to be quite a lucrative affair.

Rev. Father C. E. Theriault, Father E. Baboury and Father C. Perron of Notre Dame de Lourdes parish, with Rev. Father Laurent Morin, Father Lionel Brunette and Father Paul Maccabee of St. Anthony's parish present.

Engagements seem to be in the air nowadays, for another one has reached our ears. The young man in question is Mr. Douglas Loucks, who has been a teller at a local bank for the past year or so, and is active in club affairs here. Doug, hails from Meaford, Ontario, and the lady of his choice is from Orangeville, Ontario. Miss Anne Dods is wearing a truly beautiful ring, set with a large sparkling solitaire diamond. The setting is of gold, quite high, and is delicately scrolled. Anne was a student at McMaster University and has recently come to Timmings.

The hope of every hunter was realized recently by Mr. Eugene Choncosky, who bagged his moose for the season. It was a handsome three-year old buck that was the quarry. We're told that it was a very short hunting trip to the Kamiskotia district, with only a few hours in the bush bringing good luck to the hunters.

Of Interest To Women

New Two-in-One Dress

By PRUNELLA WOOD

Believe it or not, this dress was first seen by your reporter as an event at the rodeo in Madison Square Garden, when Justin McCarty, the Texas designer, put on a fashion show one afternoon recently. Clearing the wild bulls and bucking horses out of the arena, a parade of old-fashioned rigs took over, and every team, carriage or jaunting cart carried a beautiful model dressed in something new and fine.

All of us liked this beige wool jumper and black rayon jersey shirt combination, seeing in it a warm, smart dress for almost any daytime affair but the most formal . . . and one good for town or country, too. We also remarked that the shirt would come in handy with wool skirts or pants.

MRS. WALTER ZURBY, SCOTTISH WAR BRIDE, WELCOMED BY SHOWER IN UKRAINIAN HALL

WORTH-ROTHWELL VOWS SOLEMNIZED

Father F. B. Murray solemnized the wedding vows at the Church of the Nativity of Miss Kathleen Rothwell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Rothwell, and Mr. Donald Worth, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Worth.

The ceremony was performed against a lovely background of Autumn flowers and lighted candles. Soft organ music was played by Miss Shirley Thomson throughout the service.

The bride was very charming in a brown wool suit, cut on the newest lines, with a frothy white lace blouse and brown accessories, and wore a delicate corsage of white mums and Pinocchio roses. She wore a beautiful pearl choker with matching earrings, the gift of the groom.

Miss Jean Smith acted as bridesmaid and was chic in a lovely suit of soft coral wool, with black accessories and corsage of roses.

Mr. Bert Smith attended the groom. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the groom's parents, 456 Spruce St. South. Mrs. Worth, attractively attired in a navy blue crepe frock with sky blue trimmings and black accessories, received the guests.

The bridesmaid received a lovely gold compact and the groomsmen a leather wallet.

The young couple will reside with the groom's parents following their honeymoon.

SHOWER HELD FOR BERYL MacQUARRIE

Miss Beryl MacQuarrie was guest of honor at a delightful cup and saucer shower recently at the home of the recently married Mrs. Fred Schroeder (nee Helen Connelly), 172 Tamarack St.

A jolly time was had by the girls carving faces on apples, which were judged for the most comical, with the prize going to Miss Doreen Robertson. The apples were then dipped in taffy and enjoyed by the girls.

A prediction game was played, with Miss Anne Ansara foretelling the most appealing future for the bride-to-be, for which she was given a prize. Miss Kathleen Harrison won the door prize.

Miss MacQuarrie is a bride-elect of Nov. 20.

Present were the Misses Helen Jemmett and Kathleen Harrison, who are to be bridesmaids at the wedding, Sylvia Greco, Peggy Strongman, Anne Ansara, Gwen Robb, Hazel Cripps, Kay Connelly, Doreen Robertson, Mrs. Fred Schroeder, the hostess, who is to be matron of honor, and the guest of honor, Beryl MacQuarrie.

CA-BO-GI PLAY HAS MARKED SUCCESS

Another successful play is added to the sizeable list of accomplishments of the Timmings Ca-Bo-Gi Club. Definitely escapist material, the three-act comedy "Come Out of the Kitchen" caught and held the capacity audience till the last curtain. Peals of laughter rang forth at the grations of the butler, the romances of the cook and the plot itself involved many a laughter-inspiring situation.

Frank Dawson's professional direction of the play ensured its success, and the artistic make-up of Len Pacione of South Porcupine added years skilfully to the characters. The work done on Pat Larmer, Jr., who played the part of Solon Tucker, attorney, would merit a screen test before bright cameras.

Amandina Romualdi played the part of Jane Ellen, the cook, and it was in her kitchen that a good many humorous situations took place. To ward off the attentions of amorous Tucker she handed him a hot kettle and frying pan, and to settle that account completely marked his face with a stove cloth while attempting to wipe it. Amandina cleverly adopted an Irish brogue for her role as cook and her complete adaptation to the part was worthy of a veteran actress.

Rita Prest was the "Black Mammy", true to form with sizeable hips, red kerchief and all. She created quite a situation when she inadvertently (but according to the script) walked into a kitchen cupboard to hide from Mrs. Falkner (a battle-axe of a woman played by Flosa Murphy) and encountered another fugitive, Thomas Leffers, a poet, played with zest by Leo Finchen, a-courtin' Cora Falkner, daughter of the tyrant, who was well portrayed by Rose Felipino.

Pat Connelly amused the audience as Randolph Weeks, another of the cook's admirer, who was put to work churning ice-cream. Charlotte Richards played the role of Elizabeth Dangerfield, a lady of quality who was forced with the rest of the family to undertake servant's tasks, and made quite a mess of them.

Ben Ward as a stiff English butler did admirably with his "mildy's" and "beg pawdon, sirs". Al Callaghan acted the part of a wealthy gentleman to perfection and Joe Reszel was a very entertaining boot-boy with his "simple-like" actions.

Miss Adelia Pellizzari, Ca-Bo-Gian, sang during the intermission at the play, accompanied by Miss A. Giovanelli. She chose "La Boheme" from Puccini's opera and "Ciribiribin" from Pestalozza. Adelia's mezzo-contralto voice rang crystal-clear over the hall.

Adelia wore a flattering yellow eye-let gown with short puffed sleeves and V-neckline with a V-insert in the skirt. Her dark brown hair contrasted with the color of the gown.
