Accidental Death Verdict In Walter Hall Death

Little Walter Hall, the 10 year old boy who was killed on September 14th on the highway near Pottsville by a car, while he was riding a bicycle, met "accidental death", according to a coroner's jury which sat at Porcupine on Sept. 23rd.

The driver of the car Alex Ivanoff of Kirkland Lake was absolved from all blame. The bicycle on which the lad was riding was blown into the path of the car by a strong wind.

He blew his horn when about 200 feet away from Hall and his two companions and the bicycles swung over toward the edge of the road. As he drew opposite the boy the one nearest the middle of the road (Walter Hall) suddenly swerved in front of him. The little boy was struck by the front wheel of his car.

The car stopped within 10 feet of the impact when brakes were applied.

He tried to turn his car to the left but it was too late to avoid the accident.

Ivanoff rushed the boy to hospital but he was dead upon arrival.

Other passengers corroborated the witness and Christopher Hall, who was with Walter when it happened gave his version of the accident which tallied with that of the driver of the car.

At the dance at the Finnish Hall on Saturday, a draw was made for an R.C.A. Victor portable radio sponsored by the local branch of the Canadian Legion. Mrs. P. M. Smith, 113 Main St. was the winner.

News From SOUTH PORCUPINE

Police Court Briefs

At Tuesday's Police Court which was a very long one, the principal case was that brought by Stanley Remijos against Frank Parsons for assault. Dr. Johnson testified to treating Remijos for a broken nose and other fairly serious facial injuries.

Remijos said that Parson came into his kitchen (where he was playing with his children), with two other men, and after discussion as to the quarrels over use of water from a well on complainant's property, called him a "bad name". "You go home please" he said, while all the family started crying - and then Parsons hit him five times. He told his wife to phone for the police but "somebody had broken the phone". His wife went next door and phoned, but Parsons had gone when Constable Conley came and took Remijos to the doctor.

Parsons denied Remijos' story and alleged that complainant had seized an axe to him.

The magistrate was slightly sceptical as to the accuracy of both stories but fined Parsons $100 and costs. Parsons was defended by Gregory Evans while W. S. Gardner appeared for Remijos.

Charged by William Cappyk, Emile Kuusela with theft of a rifle, told the magistrate he took it but was not guilty.

Evidence was given that the rifle left by Cappyk temporarily at a "shelter" or cabin in the bush, was not there when he went for it.

Police this spring located the rifle at Kuusela's home. He told the police he had bought it in Cochrane, and it was this statement which condemned him. Later he had taken the rifle home to look after it, after he had found it in his trapper's cabin in the bush.

The gun had evidently been used during the winter, and had had no care. He was ordered to make restitution, (gun and repairs) and signing a bond for a year to keep the peace.

Joseph McLeod, was sent to a reformatory for nine months definite, and 18 months indefinite on a theft charge.

"You'll be sent to school, where you can learn something of use to you if you behave" was his worship's remark.

Emil Puissari was fined $10 and costs for "common assault" upon Jack Kleimola on Sept. 11th.

At Tuesday's Police Court which was a very long one, the principal case was that brought by Stanley Remijos against Frank Parsons for assault. Dr. Johnson testified to treating Remijos for a broken nose and other fairly serious facial injuries.

Remijos said that Parson came into his kitchen (where he was playing with his children), with two other men, and after discussion as to the quarrels over use of water from a well on complainant's property, called him a "bad name". "You go home please" he said, while all the family started crying - and then Parsons hit him five times. He told his wife to phone for the police but "somebody had broken the phone". His wife went next door and phoned, but Parsons had gone when Constable Conley came and took Remijos to the doctor.

Parsons denied Remijos' story and alleged that complainant had seized an axe to him.

The magistrate was slightly sceptical as to the accuracy of both stories but fined Parsons $100 and costs. Parsons was defended by Gregory Evans while W. S. Gardner appeared for Remijos.

Charged by William Cappyk, Emile Kuusela with theft of a rifle, told the magistrate he took it but was not guilty.

Evidence was given that the rifle left by Cappyk temporarily at a "shelter" or cabin in the bush, was not there when he went for it.

Police this spring located the rifle at Kuusela's home. He told the police he had bought it in Cochrane, and it was this statement which condemned him. Later he had taken the rifle home to look after it, after he had found it in his trapper's cabin in the bush.

The gun had evidently been used during the winter, and had had no care. He was ordered to make restitution, (gun and repairs) and signing a bond for a year to keep the peace.

Joseph McLeod, was sent to a reformatory for nine months definite, and 18 months indefinite on a theft charge.

"You'll be sent to school, where you can learn something of use to you if you behave" was his worship's remark.

Emil Puissari was fined $10 and costs for "common assault" upon Jack Kleimola on Sept. 11th.
