Paul Gallico On Reducing The Golf Score - That Is

There is a party by the name of Alex Morrison who has written a book about how to reduce your golf score and guarantee your money back if after sampling his volume you don't cut down from 100 to 92 in 30 days - and what is more he will do it too, because he is a very smart Joe among the professionals. I am not trying to horn in on his racket, but what we try to give you with this great newspaper is service, and herewith FREE the Gallico Golf Method.

If after reading this, you do not cut down from ten to twenty strokes in one week, send us a $5.00 bill as a consolation fee to soothe our injured feelings. It isn't much, but if we get enough of them it's a living.

What is the cause of the average high score of the beginner, duffer, or hardened golfer bum? Is it his swing? No, because the average week-end or business man golfer has no swing, so it cannot be that. He has a jab, a hack, a gouge, a poke and an uppercut, but definitely no swing. Nor is it the pivot. If the average forty-four stouter tried to pivot he would wind up shifting his bay window around to his back where it would look odd to say the least. We are against the pivot as a very dangerous thing to a man over forty. We are also against shifting the hips. You shift those hips one too often, or too far, and you'll wind up in a wheel chair.

Can you just stand up and hit the ball? Can you just stand up? Then with no practice and very little study, and with the memorizing of a few simple rules and figures, the Gallico Method will have you playing in the low eighties. For the answer to the above questions is simple: You do not play the game under the perfect conditions to which your age, dignity and standing in the community entitle you.

Note how it is when the professional plays. Everybody holds mousy still when he drives or puts. Force carries the line the course to spot his ball and keep it from getting lost. He studies the wind direction and velocity before he hits a wood or iron, he examines each blade of grass and the tilt and topography of the green before he puts. Before he plays a tournament he practices over a course until he knows every inch of it by heart. Naturally, when he goes to the post he plays around in 66 or 67. So could you, if you were as good as he.

But the ridiculous thing is that YOU are penalized for things which are not basically your fault, such as middle-aged spread, arthritic wrists and interlocking kneecaps, as well as the abnormal hazards of the course and conditions which the professional does not have to meet.

Under the great Gallico Golf Method, all this is reversed. Instead of penalties, you give yourself justifiable bonuses when the situation calls for one. The only thing the Method asks is that you show a reasonable amount of honesty.

For instance, here is how it works. You slice one off into the weeds. Lost ball. Ordinary penalty, two strokes. Unfair. If you had a fore caddy like the pros, the ball wouldn't have been lost. Well, it's bad enough you have parted with a piece of property that had cost you 85 cents without losing strokes as well, so you GIVE yourself two strokes on the hole at which you lost the ball, and one stroke on the next hole to compensate you for still being sore and thinking about losing the pill on the last one which interferes with your mental balance and puts you off your game. This is only reasonable.

Now, here is a partial list of bonuses. With it as a guide you can make up the rest as you go along. Opponent coughing or caddy rattling bag as you hit the ball, one stroke. Out of bounds, two strokes, since this is the fault of the golf architect and the niggardly policy of the club for not buying enough land. Unplayable lie, one stroke. Ball in pond, three strokes and two on the next hole for injured feelings. T-tipped mashie, one stroke - will teach the manufacturers to make the clubs long enough. Ball caught by wind and carried into rough or bunker, two strokes - you're a busy man and haven't time to be a meteorologist as well as a golfer. After first shot fails to come out of bunker, give yourself a bonus of one stroke for each successful shot needed to get out. All puts that rim cup or approach to within a half inch of the brink shall be considered sunk. You are not responsible for irregularities in the terrain of the green.

A sample hole would go like this: Drive sliced out of bounds, second shot bunkered, third into the woods, fourth lost ball, three to get down to the edge of the green, approach topped, second approach jabbed and four putts. That adds up to fourteen. But that's just adds up to fourteen. No man can take fourteen shots on one hole. Now add up your bonuses. Two strokes for out of bounds. Your opponent sneezed, one stroke. Lost ball, two strokes, and one from the last hole makes three. One each for a topped shot and an extra one in the bunker. That makes nine. Nine from fourteen is five. That's your score. That's the great Gallico Golf Method.

High Mass was sung Monday morning in St. Alphonsus Parish Church for the late Mrs. Murphy. Misses Betty and Esther Murphy are on the Public School Staff.

The service of Worship in Trinity United Church was conducted by the Rev. J. A. Breckenridge. At the morning service the theme of his sermon was "Revival" and in the evening "With Other Tongues". The choir sang two lovely anthems "Great Is The Lord" and "God Speed The Right". Mrs. James Huxley accompanied at the organ. The lovely flowers on the altar of the church were placed by Mr. and Mrs. Frank McWhinnie and family in memory of the late James Stirrat, Railroad St.

The Women's Missionary Society of Trinity United Church held their meeting Wednesday evening in the church hall. The president Mrs. Wes McLaren was in the chair. Mrs. H. Waddell gave a very interesting talk on the Missionaries in Africa and their work in translating the Bible in the African Dialect. During the business session delegates were appointed to attend the W.M.S. Presbyterial at Kapuskasing. Mrs. Howard Waddell, Mrs. Bert Waite and Mrs. Dan Fraser were nominated. After the business session the meeting closed with the benediction.

Dr. R. V. Weston, returned at the week-end from Toronto where he attended the Dental Convention.
