

News From SOUTH PORCUPINE

Mrs. Helen Bawtineimer and Mrs. Gladys Greenacre were joint hostesses on Thursday evening in honor of Miss Beulah Rayner who is to be married shortly to Mr. Fred Budreau of South Porcupine.

Beulah was born in the Porcupine camp, attended school here, and until recently was employed at the Preston East Dome Mine. Her sunny and generous disposition have endeared Beulah to all who have ever known her, and the "sweetheart of the camp" of baby days has become the most popular girl in the camp. As a young woman she carries with her into married life the very best wishes for future happiness from the entire community.

Thirty close friends gathered at the home of Mrs. Chas. McInnis of Porcupine to surprise the bride-elect when she arrived. The house was beautifully decorated with garden flowers, and the lovely gardens around made a lovely setting for the party. Beulah was led along a treasure hunt uncovering gifts as she went, eventually ending under a cluster of confetti-filled balloons in the garden, which gave the clue to the final "buried treasure". A lovely chest of silver in the "Eternally Yours" pattern was the group gift for which the guest of honor appropriately thanked them.

The lunch was carried out in the same color scheme as the rest of the party, pink and green, and the plates of dainty sandwiches of all varieties, colored, the relish dishes, and the dainty cakes were a beautiful picture, as good as they looked. The bride's cake, occupied the place of honor on the lace cloth flanked by pink candles, and decorated with pink roses.

Assembled to honor Miss Rayner were her mother, Mrs. Wilson Rayner, the hostesses Mrs. Greenacre and Mrs. Bawtineimer and guests Mesdames: Joyce Sullivan, Margery Nobb, Vivian Haneperry, Lillian Tessler, Doris Pyke, Vera Morohan, Helen Childs, Helen Smith, Newsham Rock, Marjory Richardson, Jane Blackburn, Martha Luxton, Olive Dood, Marie Myers, Marion Kaufman, Marjory McVey, Violet McDonald, Dorothy Durkin, Jeanne Humphries, Jane McCann, Helen Ferguson, Ruby Johnson and Josephine Ehler and the Misses Pearl Kennedy, Helen Haneperry and P. Smith.

Conservative Punch Gone - Outorganized By CCF Says Post

NEW P-C THEME SONG — Much of the Conservative organization is torpid, says a Financial Post editorial on Mr. Bracken's resignation. A good deal of it is under the thumb of veterans who don't know their punch is gone. In some recent contests the Conservative candidates almost prided themselves on the fact that they did not electorally. Naturally they were defeated. They should read, re-read and paste up over their bathroom mirror a recent Financial Post article telling in detail the immense organizational and vote-getting job which is done by the CCF. If Liberals and Conservatives continue their haughty, lethargic campaign methods, democracy in this country is going to be lost.

It is important to every Canadian who is concerned about the survival of our way of life that the Conservatives hitch up their braces and get down to work.

At Winnipeg in 1942 the chief oratorical theme was the break with the past, the resurgence of the new Progressive Conservative party. The theme song was "The old grey mare ain't what she used to be." Next time they could well use "Heigho, heigho it's off to work we go."

MOORE NO FURY — Our recent comment, says Napier Moore in his Financial Post column, concerning the sculptured animals above the entrance to the new Bank of Montreal building in Toronto moved one reader into about of profound research. He has sent us an article on "Superstitions in the Building Field."

The article says that the custom of placing sculptured animals around entrances started with the ancient Egyptians. They believed that the door was the opening through which death, the furies and all other undesirable ones entered a building. So it was necessary to scare them away. Usual procedure was to place a pair of sculptured lions or other beasts, one on each side of the door. The more frightful the form, the better the insurance.

Well, we are no fury, but some of the modern sculpture certainly terrifies us.

PREVENTING UTILITY STRIKES — The problem of averting strikes in vital industries is a complex one. Most Canadians answering a Financial Post questionnaire on the subject ("How would you prevent strikes and damage of strike threats in railway and other via public services?") had a definite answer; but their suggestions varied widely.

Some advocated outlawing strikes in such industries, by requiring both sides to accept the findings of an arbitration board. Some doubted the advisability or feasibility of this. A few suggested government operation of such utilities, in case of necessity, one or two called for a policy of "conciliation to the very end"; while one urged a union of employers, which could threaten labor with a general shutdown, to counter a strike threat.

HURT-TO-BOSS COMPLEX — There's probably little difference, comments The Financial Post editorially, between workers in Britain and workers in Canada in their attitude toward "the bosses"; particularly among the more militant unionists.

Herbert Morrison, Deputy Prime Minister of Britain and a chief apostle of nationalization, a little disturbed at the fact that "socialist magic" hasn't induced any terrific upsurges of effort by the workers in nationalized industries, said recently: "The greatest obstacle to participation by the workers in the direction of industry is their own habit of behaving as if there were some sinister boss in the background whom it was necessary to defeat by achieving as little as possible."

This attitude of workers isn't as evident in Canadian industry as it used to be. Better methods of employee relations have done a big part of the job. But the job is never done; it must be worked at all the time.

The Y Week

Employment Service — During the month of July the Porcupine Community Y.M.C.A. has had a large number of calls from Employers for assistance in locating young boys and girls for permanent employment. The Y.M.C.A. is always glad to be able to assist in this way, and is able to recommend young people for jobs. It has not been able to find enough young people to fill the permanent jobs available, but there are a large number of teen-age boys and girls who plan to return to school in September who are available for temporary employment. Information concerning them may be obtained from the Y.M.C.A. office, at 177 Algonquin Blvd. West.

Y's Men Honour Don Moore — After the regular business had been concluded at the weekly meeting of the Timmins Y's Men's Club, the members of the club along with several guests gathered to honour Don Moore who is being married early in August. A presentation is to be made to Mr. Moore before he leaves. Music during the evening was provided by Jimmy Ormiston at the piano and a singsong was led by Dave Wemyss.

Gamma Phalanx Have Weiner Roast — As a final activity for the month of July, the members of the Gamma Phalanx Club decided to have a weiner roast and outing. The club has decided to discontinue meeting during the month of August because most of the members of the club will be on vacation during that month. The club will reconvene in September when all members return.

Ball Leagues Active — The Y.M.C.A. Softball League has had hard luck this season having had several games postponed on account of rain, but these games will be picked up during the season. At present the Atlas and the Aces are tied for first place with four points each.

Over the weekend a group which consisted of members of the Primus Phalanx Club and some of their friends had an exhibition game with a team at Connaught. The Y.M.C.A. team was defeated by a close score and is returning to Connaught this weekend to endeavour to redeem themselves. The following weekend, it is expected that the Connaught team will come to Timmins for a return game.
