Highlighting the many social events held in the district was the very successful afternoon tea held in the hall of First United Church on Saturday. Sponsored by the Women's Missionary Society much fine work had been done to ensure its success. Many guests who attended were extended cordial welcome by Mrs. W. Mustard, and Mrs. R. Milne. Assistant hostesses were Mrs. A. Rose, Mrs. A. Jackson and Mrs. A. Gillies.

The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion and featured large vases of glowing daffodils flanked by tall lighted tapers shining over the warm colorful Mexican motifs which formed the main decorative scheme. Mrs. A. Gillies and Mrs. A. Jackson were responsible for the eye catching decorations. In an adjoining room several tables were set up. One of home baking featured a host of delicacies, this was under the supervision of Mrs. P. Carson, Mrs. W. Bull, Mrs. H. Hansuld, and Mrs. S. Ireland. Mrs. R. McLaren and Mrs. G. Included in the numbers were waltzes by Strauss, modern classics and a number of popular songs. The ladies wish to extend a vote of thanks to all who contributed in any way to the success of the affair.

FASHION SHOW NOTES---Spring was definitely on the way yesterday. Pressure had forced the reign of snow and ice to abdicate in favor of a new world, the world of fashion, and beautiful clothes. As presented by the Olive Thomson Shoppe and Helen's Style Shoppe, the gala parade was held in the Victory Theatre and was sponsored by the Kinettes.

The designers collection for spring and summer once again highlights that easy-to-wear quality that always distinguishes good clothes. But this year something new has been added, a dainty, lady-like look which has crept into even the most casual fashions and which makes them utterly charming. This look is achieved in the Empire lines with their rising waists and scooped necklines, their short, full sleeves and smooth skirts. But this year's look has no relationship to the "little girl" look of yesteryear. In a way one might venture to say that the "little girl" look has grown up, and, in maturing, has turned into a well-bred and very lovely young lady.

Much of the interest and the femininity of the new fashions are attained through fabrics.

Throughout the dress collection skirt interest is paramount. Skirt lengths remain pretty much unchanged, but skirt width shows much variety, ranging from slender to full, sometimes with the fulness massed at back or front, and sometimes, all around. Then too, there is the pulled-back look which is emphasized by flounces, or draped in apron effect.

Necklines, too vary, some are low, round, portrait necklines, convertible types that can be worn up or down. The high midriff, a direct outcome of the Empire influence, is important throughout the collection and there is considerable use of the jacket and bolero in some instances, capes with sharply flared backs.

Difference too was noted in the cuffed shorts, most made of corduroy, also in that happy combination, on the practical side, of the waist and skirt costume.

And hats. Pretty as the first spring crocus were the hats, some has a pixie contour and gay field flower trim. There were also many tams, striking in their severe simplicity.

Spring suits and coats have all the soft gaiety of pussywillows. They also come in the same delectable shades with leafy overtones. The new trends are all towards femininity. Pocket flaps are set on a slant and the slim fitting skirts, some with buttons added are fashioned on slender elegant lines. Two jacket styles are predominate. Waist-length and fitted, or the very short and very flared type. Both are lovely.

In keeping with the Empire look, the prints and they are many and varied are patterned in small designs, well blended colors. Wonderfully versatile are some of the dresses with their extra jacket.

On the "pretty party and dance side", these are gorgeous creations. Treasures from the long ago, dresses that look as light as thistledown and ready to float you into the ballroom by their very airiness. They are made of taffeta, nylon and heavy crepe and feature the glowing and shimmering shades of Victorian rose, antique blue, greys, bronze and blacks. And these swathe you in yards and yards of beauty. On some the shoulders are discreetly covered drapery gathered into imaginative stoles.

The bridal gown as worn by Vivian Pierce was truly a masterpiece of design, with its cutaway skirt of heavy satin, from which peeped forth tier upon tier of lace.

Convener of the fashion show was Jeannette Towsley, assisted by Anne Hartman and Bobbie Lawrie. Program committee, Aili Mapplebeck and Eileen Wallace. Publicity, Elsie Leppan and Bernice Ostrosser. Ticket convener, Gladys Hepburn and Dolly Strickland. Posters, Doris Sturgeon. Door prize tickets, Kay Bowker. Ramp, Margaret Alexander. Assistants, Mary Fairweather, Margaret Wigley, Estelle Harrison, Mary Jones, Claire

Petrus-Yuskow Nuptial Vows Exchanged At Church of Nativity

The Church of the Nativity decorated with flowers, fern and candlelight was the setting for the wedding on Saturday morning of Anne Yuskow daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. Yuskow to John Petrus, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. A. Petrus.

The young couple exchanged nuptial vows before Reverend Hugh Martindale and the wedding music was played by Ed Sheculski.

The bride given in marriage by her father was radiantly lovely in a gown of white pannelled net and French lace over shimmering white satin, fashioned with moulded basque, long tight fitting sleeves forming lily points over the wrists and a fully bouffant skirt sweeping into a long circular train. Her full length veil of French net appliqued in white satin fell in billowing folds from a coronet encrusted with orange blossoms and pearls. The bridal bouquet was fashioned of American Beauty roses.

Mrs. Mary Sura, was matron of honor, and wore a gown of pale blue jersey styled with cap sleeves, a fitted bodice with a low rounded neckline studded with nailheads and a bouffant skirt. She wore a ruffled head-dress, matching blue mittens and carried a colonial of red roses.

Miss Helen Marciniushyn, was bridesmaid, and wore an ensemble in pink fashioned on similar lines to that of the matron of honor.

Little Mary Sura Jr., was flower girl and was frocked in a long gown of blue jersey with a little dutch cap and she carried an old fashioned nosegay of red roses.

Bondan Czyns was groomsmen while Tony Prichnaty ushered.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents where the many guests were received by the bride's mother, wearing an afternoon dress of black printed jersey with black accessories and corsage of red roses and shattered carnations.

Pouring tea from a table most attractive with lace cloth centred with a three-tiered wedding cake flanked by tall lighted tapers were Mrs. Walter Yuskow, Mrs. Bugera and Mrs. Stratero.

Out of town guests at the wedding were Helen Marciniushyn and Mrs. Ann Marciniushyn and Mrs. Stratero.

Gifts to the attendants were a glamour pin to the matron of honor and pearls to the bridesmaid. The little flower girl received a gold-filled locket, the best man and usher ties.

Prior to her marriage the bride was entertained by Mrs. M. Figgins, Mrs. M. Sura and Mrs. W. Yuskow.

Father of Alex Cadman Passes In Haileybury

Albert Cadman, who settled on a farm at Dawson's Point in 1903 and has lived in the district ever since, died in Haileybury last Saturday, February 19th. He was in his 84th year and for several years past had lived at the home of Mrs. L. Nicholls, Lake Shore Road.

Born in Manchester, England, Mr. Cadman went first to South Africa before the close of the last century. In 1901 he first came to Canada and two years later he purchased the farm at Dawson's Point from the late John Spencer. For many years he operated the farm, later disposing of it when he became too old for active work and making his home in town.

Mr. Cadman was married in South Africa in 1896 to Elizabeth Luke-Browne, who died in Haileybury several years ago. He was an anglican and was a member of the Masonic Order during his residence in South Africa.

Surviving Mr. Cadman are two sons, Alex Cadman of Timmins and W. F. B. Cadman of New Liskeard. A daughter and a son, Mrs. Leo Erenhous and George Cadman, predeceased their father.

The funeral was held on Monday afternoon, with the service in the Tulloch Funeral Chapel and interment in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.
