THE STAGE COACH RETURNS TO LONDON: A useful dollar-earner is the 150-year-old stage coach now trundling round London, England, every day with loads of American visitors, who find a novelty in seeing the Old City in the old way. Run by the Stage Coach Company, it is driven by "Yorky" Wilson, former coachman to the Lord Mayor of London, who is accompanied by the traditional red-coated Guard who blows his long horn to give warning of approach in traffic. A round trip of the 'sights', starting and finishing at the Milestone Hotel, Kennington, takes 11/2 hours. The coach holds 12 people in comfort and offers an excellent vantage point for vision. This picture shows the stage coach passing the Victoria Memorial opposite Buckingham Palace, and watched by a young American Officer and his wife who are on leave from Germany.
