Police Court

Three drunks paid $10 and costs. William Shaw, charged with reckless driving on October 18th, paid $100 and costs and had his driver's license suspended for 60 days.

The accident in which Shaw was involved, took place on the highway to Timmins between the junction of the highways and the cemetery at 7:15 p.m.

According to statements made by J. Oreskavitch and Mrs. L. Matisani (both of whom were hurt and required medical attention after the accident) he was driving towards South Porcupine when Shaw came up from behind, and the impact landed both truck and car in opposite ditches.

Neither driver of truck nor his passenger knew what had happened. Shaw made a statement to the police following the accident, and acknowledged having had 4 bottles of beer, but police agreed he was not intoxicated although "on the border."

Shaw said he saw no lights on the truck, and a car coming towards him confused him with the glare of the headlights.

The magistrate's comment was: "The trouble is beer doesn't go well with driving," and imposed the above fine.

H. Helmer paid $50 and costs for "transporting deer," a charge brought by Sylvester, game warden.

Charge against 4 other men was withdrawn.

Teddy Byrnes Dies In Porcupine Hosp.

The death occurred on Tuesday night in Porcupine General Hospital of little William James (Teddy) Byrnes, eldest child of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Byrnes, South End Garage.

The little boy died of peritonitis after a few days' illness.

He leaves a little brother of 3, and a baby sister.

Yesterday a service was held in Hunkin's Funeral Parlors conducted by Rev. R. J. Scott, Rev. Davis, of Golden City, and Major Majury. The body was shipped to North Bay on the Northland for interment in North Bay Cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. R. Byrnes are natives of North Bay and have lived in South Porcupine for the past three years.

The first day I opened my dental office an old lady came in. "Good morning," she said. "I need a filling in one of my back teeth."

I looked at her mouth and was surprised to find that she had a full set of false teeth—with a few fillings in both uppers and lowers. "But you can't possible," I began.

"Young man, I've worn dentures for 40 years. Every young man needs a boost to his morale to get started, and I can't help you young fellows any other way. I've done the same thing with several young dentists and it seemed to give them a laugh and a lift."

Without further argument, I took her lower denture and added another filling to her collection.

Kiwanis Entertain

Hallowe'en with its quota of pranks and hand-outs went off fairly quietly in S. Porcupine. In the afternoon at the public school's "dress-up" parties were allowed, and much of the bubbling fun had time to evaporate before evening.

As usual the Kiwanis Carnival Hallowe'en skating party at the arena provided outlet for exuberance, and it was quite a success. A few groups—mostly quite small people—came around to show off their costumes and appeared quite satisfied with the resultant "shell-out."

I had spent the day in London. I had gone through the heart of the city and seen the gaps here and there. In Oxford St. and Bond St., business places are still doing business on the old spots. One story—the shop—generally is the order of the day, with building going on all around.

The new places I found very modern and quite American in their newness.

I went up Holborn, and saw that the very old timbered houses there had miraculously escaped injury, but when I reached the viaduct I looked in vain for any old landmark I remembered.

Here is where the bombs wrought havoc. Here one notes the remains of domed and pillared vestibules, "what remains of the 'Livery Hall of the Worshipful Company of Lord-wainers' among others, and on that Saturday afternoon the sun shone upon the mauve of the Canadian "fire-weed" and on clumps of yellow dandelions, and upon a chessboard of low brick walls tangled across a waste land in the heart of a great city.

Here lie in ruins the churches of St. Mildred (Bread St.) and St. Augustine and St. Faith!

And here I saw a sight which gave me food for thought.

Rising above the almost indecent exposure of cellars and waste pipes rose one brick wall—sheared it seemed to me by a giant sword from some nest of dwellings—and as I stood and gazed I counted nearly dozen little black fireplaces—the hearts of one-time homes in this district where slums were thick (and awful!

And among the weeds and destruction stands, yet, intact, the black and silver mass of St. Paul's Cathedral where the gold cross still shines burnished in the sun as though newly polished.

I remembered Ainsworth's "Old St. Pauls"—the Great Fire of 1666—and later the Great Blitz of 1940 and '41, when St. Paul's was preserved by miracle alone!

There is some plan, I believe, to make this area over into a park for perhaps it would be better to let it remain as a grim reminder of the horrors of war.

But even through all this horror and devastation of man's making, there will remain as a wordless sermon, the miracle of St. Paul's, and the CROSS!

I went on to Westminster Abbey (which was slightly damaged but not to any extent and this stately edifice, with history in every stone, having been away so long.

One breathes ancient and modern history here with every breath and in every nook and cranny one sees names of greatness.

One walks upon tombs upon which are inscribed names familiar to all who have any knowledge of British history.

I saw a knot of Americans gathering in one spot, and went to investigate.

I found a newly placed plaque on the wall, in memory of Franklin D. Roosevelt. I thought this a nice gesture between friendly nations, but something under the plaque interested me more.

It was a light (kept always burning) within a large glass box. In this box was a huge volume, illuminated by beautiful hand script, containing all the known names of those innocents whose lives were blotted out in the raids on London.

Each day a new page is turned.

When I saw it it was open at the letter "D." I noted that one whole family named Davis had been wiped out—Grandmother, parents, and six children.

But their names are inscribed with the great, within the Abbey, who died for England, and whose names will live for ever.
