Schoolhouse Open House Dates

Our July open house was such a success that we squeezed in an August one as well! We are getting a great turn out to these. Feel free to drop by and bring something for “show & tell”!

October 14th is our next date. The school is open 1:30-3:30 for people to go through our archives, to visit and reminisce.

TTHS Fall Fair

Join us for the TTTHS Fall Fair September 24th during Oakville Doors Open 10am to 4pm at the schoolhouse. Featuring Fred Oliver display, a photo exhibit & sale, early school book and desk display, children’s activities, heritage group displays, BBQ, archives room available for research. If you would like to share your family heritage information or artefacts that day please let us know.

I found this photo of one of our first fairs. Joyce Burnell is dressed in heritage costume. Joyce was one of our supporters and passed away at the age of 90 in March of this year.

Queries & Contributions

Artist J. Weykamp

Mike & Lesley Stott own a painting by J. Weykamp and have been trying to find out who he or she was. We have a scan of a painting by Weykamp (TTOIDED0018) which is a scene of horses and men working on a road that is called “Pulling Stone for Trafalgar Road”. The painting they have is one of an old woman asleep in a chair. The signatures look identical.

Can anyone help?

Trafalgar Post Offices

Irene Saunders sent in this response to the question about the Traflagar Post Office. When he took over the general store at Postville in 1925 my uncle, Leslie Bradley took over the job of postmaster as well. It was always called the Trafalgar Post office and was at the rear of the store. I don't know the name of the former post master. You'd have to go to the registry office to find that. I know that Uncle Leslie's pay was not as much as the former postmaster because they said he didn't have the experience..
