

Results from the hospital's plea for "rags" came almost immediately after the first Terrace Bay News rolled off the press. The source of supply was unexpected -- but it appears that in our warehouse there are bales of the finest quality of old rags a person could want.

So -- we withdraw our plea for your old pyjamas, towels, etc. With the prevailing dusty conditions, it is expected no one has an over-supply of such articles, anyway.

One of our young ladies desirous of emulating said feats, popped in to the shower and lathered herself up with bubble bath soap until Cleo herself would have turned green with envy but lo and behold, the water ceased to run (cut off, to you) and our young lady was left stranded high and dry like a babe in white wooly and swaddling clothes. Our natural modesty did not permit us to view the solution of the problem, but we do know that the water was turned on again a couple of hours later.

Shirley has decided that she had to drop up to Port Arthur this coming weekend to have her eyes examined. "Come, come, Shirley, there certainly is nothing wrong with the colour even if there should happen to be a tiny bit of green in them".
