

THE WISE GUY Almost always in every department in a Mill there is the fellow who takes pleasure in belittling the work or advice of anyone who suggests doing a thing the right way. He's the "wise guy" who says; "Sure, that's what he says, but why go to all that trouble?" He then goes on to make you feel like a heel if you take sensible precautions, such as using safety equipment or doing a job the right way. Then, running true to form, if you get hurt or just bawled out, he fades out of the picture, and you wonder why you listened to him.

Well, why did you? Why not stand on your own two feet--in safety shoes, of course--and decide for yourself whether to be safe or sorry? Sure, it seems a nuisance sometimes to wear goggles or get the right tool or equipment for the job, or even just to use common sense to prevent an accident.

But, stop to think how it HURTS to get HURT--then pass up the Wise Guy's advice and make SAFETY your habit.
