THE GUNNERS' COLUMN

Now that the festive part of the season is over, it is the time for an earnest effort on the part of our members to turn out on every parade and dig in on our course of training.

Through the years of military training, many gripes and beefs have been heard from the boys who had to go over the lessons time and time again until it became second nature, but when the chips are down, sound training, repetition and discipline has paid off,

Sound weapon training is the basic fundamental of every soldier, and knowing weapons and how to use them is the difference between being an effective unit and just one to plug the gap.

The emphasis is on sound weapon training, but later on other things will follow, so let's do the basic lessons first, and do them well. We are not above criticism, but if there is any, we would like to hear it - on one condition; come down to the Armouries and tell us. We will be glad to listen.

Through countless generations, our Christmas seasons have been made possible through men in whose hearts freedom lived and who gave their lives so that we may still enjoy this freedom of expression. Surely this is still worth keeping prepared for.

Our first parade of the New Year is on the first Tuesday in January.
