

BINGOBINGOBINGONEW BOOKS FOR THE LIBRARY

The Scarlet Dawn - Rev. R.M. Hickey, Major M.C. In this story you have the experiences of a well-known Canadian Army Chaplain whose personality was the inspiration of many a soldier during the past war. You will like this story, for it is told with that touch of humor and understanding that endeared the author to the troops and made him the most respected and best beloved of Chaplains.

Murder in Montana - Muriel Bradley
Here is a smoothly written story combining romance and suspense and murder against a realistic Montana background.

Golden North - Marie McPhedran

Marie McPhedran first went into Flin Flon when it could be reached only by canoe, snowmobile, or airplane. She went on long trips into Northern Manitoba and Saskatchewan where her husband, the late Gordon Duncan, examined prospectors' finds as Director of Exploration for important mining companies. She is no tenderfoot, therefore: her picture of the North is authentic in every detail.

Canadians - A Book of Biographies - Lorne J. Henry M.A. Here are stories of twenty men and women who have contributed to the development of Canada in the fields of exploration, science, medicine, music, art, writing, prospecting, government, education, missionary work, etc. Living under a variety of circumstances, some favourable and others unfavourable, they made their own lives a success and contributed to the well-being of others.

An Introduction to Birds - by John Kieran
The reader will feel, as he turns these pages, that John Kieran's "modest aim" is modest indeed. The expert ornithologist will read this book with the same delight as the beginner, for John Kieran writes with the familiarity and enthusiasm of an outdoor man to whom birds - in the field - are a source of never-ending excitement and pleasure. And Don Eckelberry's full-color paintings are superb.
