WHITE TRILLIUM, PROVINCIAL FLOWER

Ontario's floral emblem, the white trillium, will be found in great abundance in various parts of the deciduous forests and woodlands of the Province during late April and May dependent on regional weather conditions. The white trillium was adopted as the floral emblem in legislation approved by the Legislature in 1937.

Visitors to the Muskoka area say that many of the roadways off main highways will be found almost bristling with the native plant with its waxy white, sometimes shaded into a pale mauve, flowers. They arrive before the trees bloom into leaf, last year about May 24.

"This native plant with its beautiful waxy, white flowers is associated with gladness, beauty and fresh hope of spring. In remote places far from towns and cities, one can find white trilliums in great abundance, extending sometimes as far as the eye can see beneath the trees. Associated flowers are Yellow Adder's Tongue, Dutchman's Breeches, Spring Beauty and many others, making the woods in early spring a picture of unbelievable beauty and profusion. The flowers of the white trillium are very sensitive to light. The countless numbers of flowers usually face in one direction, like the familiar sunflower, following the sun in its course across the sky."
