Escorted to the altar by her father, the bride wore a tier skirt of nylon tulle net with large panels of imported Chantilly lace. The tight fitted bodice, the wasp waist was made with Chantilly lace and a tiny collar trimmed with seed pearls. The long sleeves were lily-pointed at the wrists. Her chapel veil of silk illusion embroidered net formed three tiers and fell from a flat coronet of Chantilly lace with scallops in seed pearls and clipped to the sides with lily-of-the-valley. The bride wore satin brocaded pumps and carried a nosegay of mauve orchids and a shower of rose buds with her white bridal prayer book.

Both attendants wore blue mittens and a halo of blue French flowers, and carried a cascade of pink carnations.

Brother of the bride, Mr. Albert Valentino was groomsman, while Messrs. Arnold Almos and Gerald Nicol of Jackfish and Paul Pelto of Schreiber ushered.

Following the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at Hotel Terrace and the wedding reception was held in the evening at Jackfish Hall.
