

SUPERIORS FIGHT BACK INTO CONTENTION

Four games have been played in the final series so far but still the outcome is in doubt. Nobody gave our Superiors much of a chance against Marathon's well balanced Mercuries and when Dave Whalen broke his hand in the second game, most people began to write off the Superiors for this season.

However, Terrace Bay regrouped, and while playing on their own ice proved to many what a fighting team they are. Marvin Osmar has been tremendous in this series while establishing himself as the league's outstanding player. When he's on the ice the pressure is always on Marathon, and when the going gets rough, he's at his best.

Marv. has had plenty of help though, especially from brother Maurice, Stachiw, Desrosiers, Hansen and Caldwell to name just a few. They won't be beaten and when a team won't be beaten, they can't be beat. Whalen's loss was a staggering blow and had he been on the ice Tuesday night it is doubtful if the game would have ended in a tie. After surging back from a 4 goal deficit to tie the game, Terrace Bay did everything but score the winning goal. The leagues leading scorer would definitely have made the difference.

So the series returns to Marathon tonight. Can the Osmars and Company continue their fine comeback, or will Marathon's ice again baffle our Superiors? We think this will be the tell-tale game of the series as a win would well carry our Superiors on to play off victory while a loss or a tie could prove fatal. At any rate this series is far from over so let's keep on backing those Superiors. Playing in front of a large group of home town fans can sway any battle.
