"Frances and the Crees" - Nan Shipley

The author of Anna and the Indians has written another exciting true adventure of the Canadian North. Frances Stevens renounced a promising musical career to follow her husband, a young missionary into the North-West Territories. In 1897 transportation was by barge and birchbark canoe in summer, by carriole and snowshoe in winter. She displayed a courageous interest in her husband's work even to facing danger by starvation, and hostile Indians when they visited bands that had never before seen a white woman or been visited by a missionary.
