

Somehow or other the mill doesn't look quite as new as it did on Tuesday the 18th. One million tons of pulp is a lot of pulp in anyone's language. Having reached this milestone pretty well establishes us as an old veteran rather than the baby of the Corporation.

This millionth ton also represents a big job well done. Just how big is difficult to conceive. Very few people have ever seen a million of anything in one place at one time. To help get across the idea of how big one million tons is and how big a job it represents just consider the following:

(a) If all the sheets contained in these million tons were laid end to end they would circle the earth 21 times.

(b) It took over 19,000 box cars to transport this pulp to the consuming mills.

(c) Over 10,000,000 (that 10 million) man hours were expended at this mill alone since start-up in producing those million tons. This doesn't include man hours expended at woodlands, in construction of the mill or by other firms in producing all the materials, equipment and supplies we use.

(d) The following amounts of material were used:

1. 1,800,000 cords of wood
2. Coal - 380,000 tons
3. Lime - 80,000 tons
4. Saltcake - 87,500 tons
5. Caustic - 50,000 tons
6. Chlorine - 80,000 tons

Add it up any way you like it still comes out to a big job that we can all be proud of.
