SALES TAX MAY START BUYING SPREE

Reports from urban centres in Eastern Ontario indicate that Municipal Governments are re-examining their spending programs in the light of the new three-per-cent provincial sales tax.

Toronto Controller William Allen said he will ask city council to urge Premier Frost to exempt municipalities from the levy which was bound to affect the tax rate. In London, Ontario, Controller Norman Bradford said that he will suggest that London start a petition among Ontario cities urging Premier Frost to exempt municipalities from the sales tax.

Toronto's budget chief said that he will recommend that Council go on a buying spree before the sales tax goes into effect Sept. 1 in an attempt to build up large stockpiles of taxable materials in anticipation of long-range needs.

While civic authorities are debating what steps to take the same is also true of the individual who, if he has the available finances, may decide that now is the time to purchase those items which he had hoped to buy in the future. This, in turn, may mean a tremendous boost in "credit buying" which, statistics show, is already at an all time high.

They are giving the Royals no quarter, the defense combination of Pollard and Brassard especially making the opposing forwards wary and respectful.

Royals, in both games have managed to stay in the running with concentrated endeavours in the Sunday game - in the 2nd period and in the third period in Tuesday's game.
