society for criticism, that all unite in a concerted effort to see that such a tragedy does not strike again.

N.B. We've had one suggestion--to equip all vehicles with rods carrying a flag. Rods high enough to be visible over the snow banks.

HOW TO BAKE A CAKE

Turn on oven; get out utensils and ingredients. Remove blocks and toy autos from table. Grease pan, crack nuts.

Measure two cups of flour; remove Johnny's hands from flour; wash flour off him; remeasure flour.

Put flour, baking powder and salt in sifter. Get dustpan and brush up pieces of bowl Johnny knocked on floor. Get another bowl. Answer door bell.

Return to kitchen. Remove Johnny's hand from bowl. Wash Johnny. Answer telephone. Return; remove salt from greased pan. Look for Johnny. Grease another pan; answer telephone.

Return to kitchen. Remove Johnny's hands from bowl. Take up greased pan and find layer of nut shells in it. Head for Johnny, who flees, knocking bowl off table. Spank Johnny.

Wash kitchen floor, table, walls, dishes. Call bakery; lie down.

It is better to go straight than to move in the best circles.

Editorially Speaking

We've been asked to write an editorial on the recent tragedy in Terrace Bay when a young child was accidentally killed while sledding--down a hill.

These requests have come from all sides--and usually from individuals who feel that some particular service, or lack of it, was a cause.

From the many opinions we have heard we sense underneath a note of frustration and helplessness. There's sorrow, sympathy for the bereaved family, railing at the fates, a hitting out in all directions but, so far, no concrete suggestions which would guarantee it could not happen again.

Children do not, as a rule, read editorials, so it won't do much good to appeal to them to listen to warnings issued by their parents and, we understand, at the schools. Little Tommy's death will frighten them for a while but, come another year, those sleds will ride merrily again.

Our suggestion is, instead of singling out departments or branches of our community

THE HOMELY HENS LAYS ONE.
