The program opened with the school choir singing and the Salutatory was given by Elizabeth McGuire.

Mr. Colborne spoke on "The Hidden Purpose of Education", saying in part, that equal opportunity in education is the gift of democracy. Primarily, education is concerned with certain basic skills - reading, writing which give the ability to communicate, calculation, an obvious requirement, and a sense of sociability. This last shows and teaches the child in first school years how to work, to share and to plan together. Geography, science and study of world events each day, provide the child with a background against which learning can be utilized. But, continued Mr. Colborne, these basic necessities of learning are not enough to create a happy human being, which is the ultimate purpose of all education. Happiness, however, is a term so widely misunderstood that much sadness and confusion result. The child must learn that work, not money, is the only means of attaining the qualities which ultimately produce the truly happy adult possessing the qualities of faith, integrity, love for others, spiritual faith, interest in books and the desire to learn. The pleasures bought with money can only bring disillusion, discontent and, often, despair.

P.T.A. President R.T. Campbell, introduced Mr. Colborne and Raymond Guillet, of the staff, thanked him for the address.

A tribute to the teachers was given by Lise Ouelette and grade 8 students were introduced by Norma McLellan. Among the many awards presented by Mrs. W. Cocks, R. Campbell, Mrs. G. McParland, M.J. McGrath and Father J.M. Cano were Highest Standing to Deborah Stewart. Most Progress to Joseph Commisso. Co-operation to Pavalo Pellegrino. Health to Janice Fournier and Albert Huard.
