to good sized houses, tracks satellites thirty-four inches in diameter, 600 to 3500 miles up by an educated anticipation as to where they might be expected. The dome covering, for it must be protected, is held up by air pressure, since any ordinary support would register as noise. Using a small lighted globe representing telestar, Mr. Forster demonstrated the power of the uncanny horn and its response to the moving light. He also demonstrated the working of the submarine cable linking continents.

He added, during his talk, that not all the instruments described or shown were Bell inventions, but all immensely added to the transmission of sound.

Contrary to the belief held by some, he said, only three percent of Bell of Canada is owned outside of Canada--the misunderstanding arising from a similarity in names between Bell and a U.S. Company.

Mr. Forster also spoke in a school while in Schreiber.

LEGION AUXILIARY MEETING
