Pope Paul VI opens the Second Session.

The second session of the Ecumenical Council is grappling with the complex internal and external problems of the 500-million-member church in one of the most magnificent settings in Christendom — St. Peter's Basilica. Responding to the appeal of Pope Paul VI for Christian unity, the 2,500 cardinals, archbishops, bishops, abbots and heads of religious orders from all over the world are taking up the theme of "De Ecclesia" ("Of the Church").

Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu

"You can only help us by telling us what is wrong with us," Mme. Ngo Dinh Nhu tells a Princeton university debating society audience. She called demonstrators against her appearance "unworthy of human beings," and said the Buddhist monks who burned themselves to death in South Viet Nam were "victims of excitement."
