

SAFETY RECORD ESTABLISHED

On November 3rd, 1963, the employees of the Kimberly-Clark Pulp and Paper Company Limited, Terrace Bay, Ontario, completed one year (365 days) of disabling injury free operation.

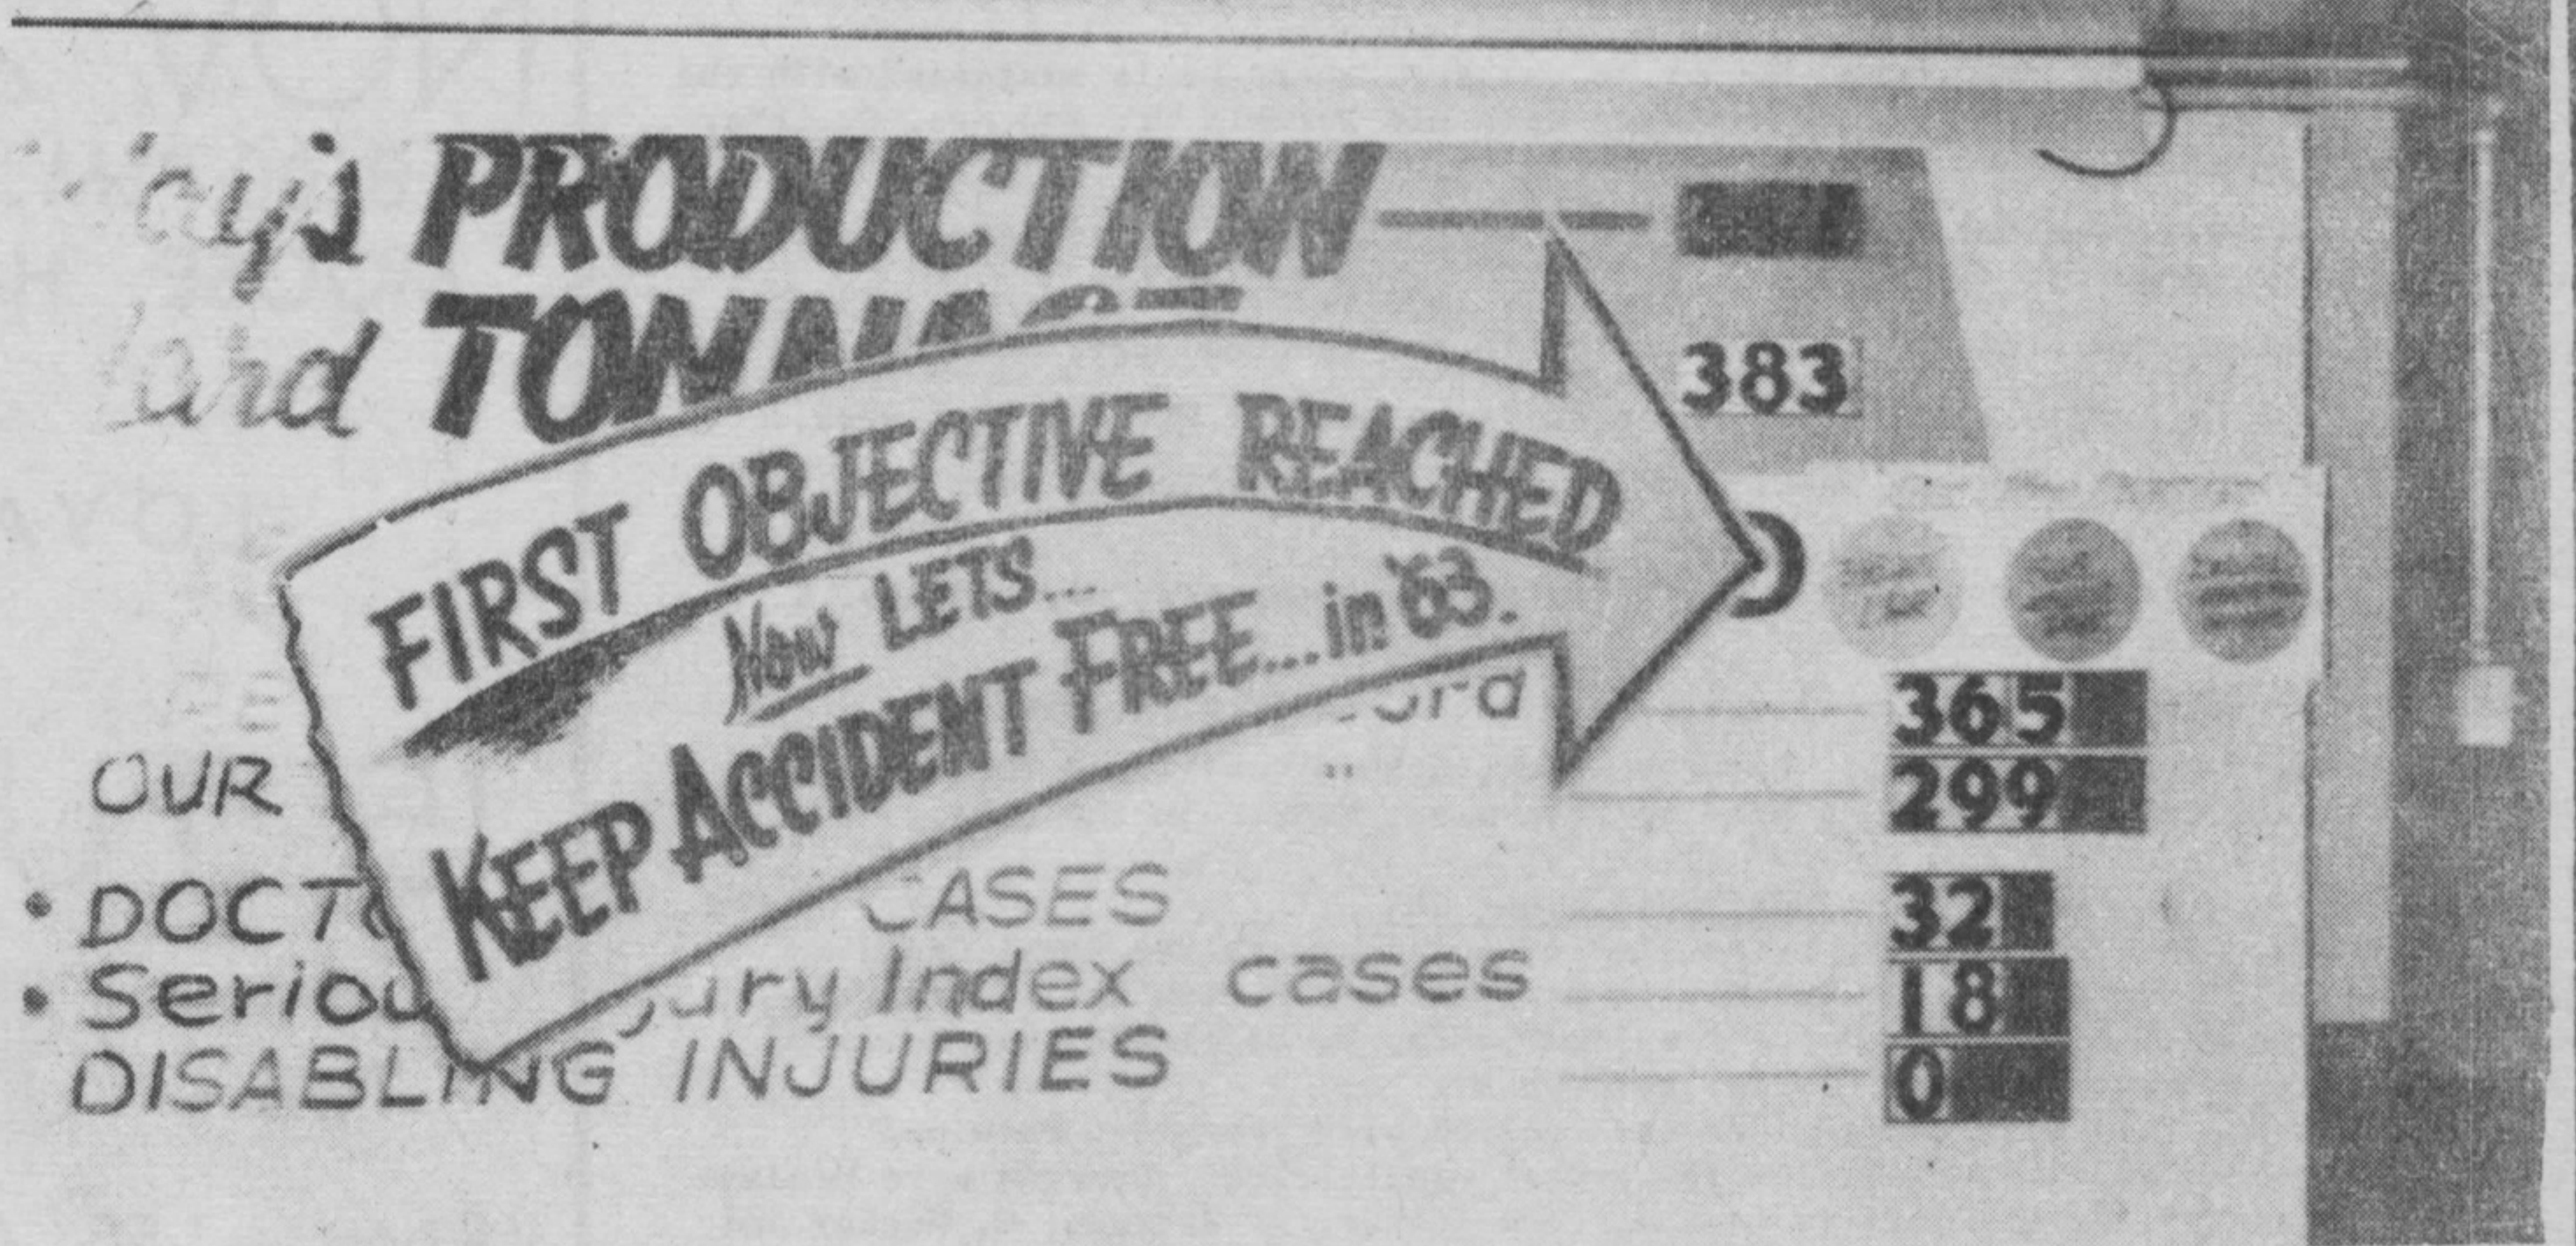

This safe day record represents over 1,259,000 man hours of operation.

The Terrace Bay mill started operation in 1948 and since that time the employees have received many safety awards for their outstanding safety records. In 1950, 1951, 1952, 1955, 1957 Safety Achievement Awards were presented to the mill by the National Safety Council. In 1956, 1957 and 1958 they won the award as the Safest Mill in Ontario.

At the 1963 annual meeting of the Ontario Pulp and Paper Makers' Safety Association the Robert J. Askin Award was presented to the mill for their exemplary safety performance during the years 1958 to 1962.

Only two other mills in Ontario have surpassed the Terrace Bay Mill's safe man hour record. The Spruce Falls Power and Paper Company, Kapuskasing in 1959 completed 1,523 man hours of accident free operation and the Industrial Cellulose Research Limited, Hawkesbury, Ontario, completed 1,946,000 safe man hours of operation in 1962.

Both of these records are now being challenged by the employees of the Terrace Bay Mill who have set as their objective 2,000,000 man hours of accident free operation.
