If your car is without seatbelts, your safety is in jeopardy. You may be sure of your own ability to drive safely but there is always the chance of being hit. Protection lies in your seatbelts. Intall them and insist that your passengers use them too.

Many older drivers who have passed 70 years are careful and reliable, but at this age their reactions are slower and sight and hearing less keen. For their own safety and that of their passengers, an annual examination for the driver's permit and a medical check up are advisable.
