LIGHTHOUSE KEEPER HONOURED

Jack Bryson, chief lighthousekeeper at Slate Island was recently presented with a twenty-five year long service award, recognizing his long period of meritorious service. The presentation, aboard the CCGS Alexander Henry, was made by Len Burden, representing F.K. McKean, district marine agent of Parry Sound, with members of the agency staff and the ship's crew present.

Jack (John R.) is well known in Schreiber and along the north shore of Lake Superior, making his home in Schreiber during the off-season.

He first joined the Department of Transport in 1939 as wireless operator on the lighthouse tender Murray Stewart and, in the same spring, transferred from the ship to the Cove Island light station at the entrance to Georgian Bay where he served as radio Beacon operator until close of navigation in 1940. He then went to the radio aviation department until 1944 when he joined the department of transport manning pool for allied merchant ships.

At the end of the war Mr. Bryson was assigned to air service, serving in Yellowknife, N.W.T. and Edmonton until 1948 when he came to Slate Island as combined lightkeeper and radio beacon operator.

With two assistants, Gustav Oldson of Port Arthur and Walter Stokes of Schreiber, he now is in charge of the light station, with radio beacon, fog alarm and navigation light and also is official weather observer for the meteorological branch of the department.

Mr. Bryson's oldest son, Rodney, interested in his father's stories of life at sea, joined the Canadian Navy a year ago and is now serving on H.M.C.S. Yukon, although he did not enter the communications branch but chose instead the mechanical department.
