INITIATION '65 FROM NEUTRAL GROUND

by Cathy Joe Cotton

Being neither the Initiate or the Initiator, I think I can write on this topic without being too prejudiced

This initiates this year, as always, were all the grade nine students and any new student of Terrace Bay High School, and much credit must be given to each one of them for taking their "punishments" so ungrudgingly. Being put through these tasks they were good natured as their initiators, grades eleven and twelve students made their officious demands.

From the very beginning of Initiation which started at a dance Friday night when the slaves were assigned masters, they lived in a state of suspense, fearful of the worst. But, as time progressed and Initiates became more familiar with their masters, the tension slowly began to disappear, although they were still wary of the notices frequently being handed out by Student Council president, Jim Mikus, for Initiators to have 'demerit' points in the suggestion box by Thursday. Sighs of relief were audible Monday morning as Jim Mikus announced that demerit points were only to determine the most deserving boy and girl initiate. This year the two chosen were Mary Jane Hopper and Graham Coe. For their good work each was the recipient of a highschool ring (compliments of Students Council).

A switch this year, the initiators were given a taste of their own medicine Monday afternoon as their slaves were given a chance to trade places. They tried to pack into half a day all and more that their masters had demanded of them in three.

But now the tension is lifted and grade niners can breathe freely.
