The Caftans are coming — Thigh high to floor brushing, these wonderful and comfortable loungers originated on the deserts of Morocco. Loose and flowing, they have widened bell sleeves and high slit necklines. Their pure simplicity provides the perfect background for a hey-day of trims — vivid embroidery, ball fringe, braid, French ribbon, ric-rac, you name it.

Don't throw out those worn leather gloves. Cover buttons; trim a hat; edge the pockets on your pant suit. Salvage that old fur coat or collar. The good parts are creative trims waiting for your needle and imagination to transform them into chic accessories — perhaps some fur knee muffs for the cold ahead?

To cut fur or leather, work from the wrong side. Chalk your cutting lines and carefully cut the hide with a razor blade. To join fur, place right sides facing, and overcast the edges with tiny hand stitches. Gently pull apart to flatten the seam. Instead of facings, use lining.

Is there a season on color? Emphatically NO! Pale pastels, traditional spring fare, now carry their feminine good looks into the frosty months. Warm earthy tones and darks, once reserved for winter, swing smartly into the warm weather. Wear the colors you like. Forget the calendar.

The Beatles cut out. The newest way with hair is called "the more hair the better" look . . . shoulder length and thick. Raised at the crown, a suggestion of curve at the ends, it's as feminine as can be with real "man appeal". Long hair needs more care than the Beatle cut, so you'd better start brushing. It makes the hair grow faster, I understand.

Undercover fabrics make a custom-made look that lasts. Interfacings provide strength and firmness in stress areas like closings, collars and cuffs. Underlinings add body to soft fabrics for a tailored effect. Cut same as outer fabric and sew to it at the seam allowances so that the two fabrics can be handled as one during construction. Lining is a silky fabric used to make the inside of a garment more attractive and to prevent stretching.
