Absorbed audience discuss paintings with Paul Bennett.

Paul Bennett, Director of the Art Institute of Ontario, held an enthralled audience both afternoon and evening in the high school when he displayed a collection of eight Canadian paintings and discussed them. For members of the Art Clubs of Schreiber and Terrace Bay it was an opportune occasion to improve their own knowledge. For others who wish to understand and appreciate the artist's purpose it was a happy opportunity when they could ask questions which were answered simply. Mr. Bennett had eight paintings on which he lectured, then invited his audience to ask questions. He was quite entertained by the unanimous reaction to one painting depicting, (according to the artist) a woman in a Toronto market, but which everyone here felt resembled the figure of an Eskimo woman. He was certain this reaction would be of interest to the artist. He urged students interested in an art career to bring samples of their work for criticism, along with work of the Art Clubs. Evidence of Mr. Bennett's sincerity and simple dialogue was seen when adults taking night school courses deserted them. at coffee break, to hear him speak.
