Fun with French would be an apt description of adults attempting to learn the language at evening classes in the High School. Laughter at the stumbling tongues is shared by teacher and pupils. Last week J.P. Tessier, taking off from a picture-lesson vocabulary, showing common kitchen utensils and condiments, vegetables and fruits, gave what he firmly declared was a favourite recipe of his. Skeptical women students asked if the concoction was made and would he eat it? "But certainly" was the answer. (cont'd on Page 14)
