Paul Revere is famous for his ride but could he match the showmanship and precision of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police?

Canada's scarlet coated "Mounties", then the Northwest Mounted Police, began their Musical Ride in 1887 at Regina, Saskatchewan - even before that province became a province.

This year, as 20,000,000 Canadians celebrate 100 years of nationhood, the sweetest icing on the Centennial birthday cake for Bonanza fans and all lovers of the Old West will be performances of the Musical Ride and Concert Band of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, as they tour Canada from coast to coast.

With red and white pennants flying from atop eight foot lances and wearing the scarlet tunics so much a part of the history and romance of the Force, these equestrian performers go through their complex paces astride jet black horses which sport Canada's emblem, the maple leaf on their rumps - achieved with brush and stencil.

A combined performance of the Band and Musical Ride will be held in Fort William, July 7th.

It would be a worthwhile trip to the Lakehead to see this group perform.

One of the new designs seen on Kleenex Tissue boxes...

KIMBERLY-CLARK CHANGE BOX DESIGN

An article in the last issue of the Co-op magazine gives details on why and how new designs were chosen for one of Kimberly-Clark's products - Kleenex!

Our correspondent recently sent us the story of two old former residents of Schreiber meeting in front of a Toronto store whose windows featured the then new product Kleenex and after gazing at it one remarked to the other "It will never sell."

Years later and after several package design changes - the name "Kleenex" is now a household word. Regardless of tissue brand names - everyone calls them "Kleenex". The package gets prettier and the product improves, more and more people ask for "Kleenex".

Fabrication gaps in Canadian industry, involving some 700 imported commodity groups, are listed in a publication released recently by Ontario Department of Economics.

The commodity groups contain hundreds of identifiable different items which could offer manufacturing opportunities for Canadian firms.

Billions of dollars are spent each year on imports, many of which could be bought or made in Canada.
