THE BIBLE TODAY

For Publication During the Week of
 August 21 to August 26, 1967

The concern of Kenyan church leaders for the future of religious education in the schools following the country's birth as an independent nation has led to a program of Bibles for schools, now in operation.

A survey in one school district had revealed that in over 100 schools, there were only 70 Bibles. It was estimated that less than 10,000 Bibles were available in the nation's schools. With rapidly developing educational facilities, Kenya now runs over 5,000 schools.

The Bible Society is putting on the market a special cheap edition of the Bible for the current program. Since the program came into operation last year, 35,000 copies have been ordered. Within the last few weeks Roman Catholic Schools have been given permission to use this Bible.

The project has awakened interest throughout the country. Many teachers have given special donations, and a number of churches have donated for the program an amount many times larger than they previously contributed in a whole year.

General distribution of Scriptures in Kenya is also soaring. Distribution of Scriptures for all last year totalled less than 400,000. In the first three months of this year alone, over one half million copies had been bought. And this is in a country of 8½ million people, of whom some 20-25% are literate.
