THE BIBLE TODAY

 Week of
 August 28 to September 2, 1967

Women play an important role in small trading in Ghana. They control much of the business in the markets and street stalls. It's not for nothing that a type of public transport is called in pidgin English "mummy lorries."

Many of these women are devoted Christians, playing an active part in the life of the church. The Bible Society in Ghana has an arrangement with 40 of these women, who spend one afternoon a week distributing the Word of God in the streets of Accra. Many of their sales are made at the bus and track stations. So among the baskets of yams and soap carried high above the crowds on the women's heads, you'll find a pile of Bibles.

From another country of Africa comes the news item that twelve copies of Scripture volumes in Braille, in Shona and English, were presented jointly by the Rhodesia Bible Society and the Women's World Day of Prayer to a blind children's institute this Spring. It is now planned to supply other schools and institutions with the Scriptures in Braille, and in languages other than English.

All available stocks of Luganda Bibles were recently requested to be sent urgently to Kampala, Uganda. They were used in a three-month campaign of Bible Distribution launched by the Church of Uganda.
