Stray dogs picked up by the local dog catcher have never had it so good.

They're coaxed into captivity with sweet talk and if that doesn't work, cheese. When they are safely under wraps, the dogs get a lift to the pound in a white convertible.

This new approach to the fine art of dog catching began last week when Marlene Bunton was appointed canine control officer for North Grimsby Township about 10 miles west of St. Catharines.

The mother of four has a wooden pole with a looped rope in the trunk of her car but she hasn't even considered using it.

"It's for handling very cross dogs and I haven't been on the job long enough to run into that problem—but I do anticipate such trouble."

Mrs. Bunton has so far coaxed five dogs into captivity with "cheese and sweet talk."

"I just call 'here boy, here,' as nice as can be and wait until they decide to come over to me," she says.

"I let them smell the back of my hand, I clap them and then just put them in the back seat of my car and drive them to my home."
