GOLF CLUB NEWS

Despite the cold weather it is still a grand feeling to once again trot down the fairways pursuing the little white ball.

The opening of the course saw the same hardy souls of late last fall well equipped to brave the could North wind.

The writer along with a foursome encountered several beginners who were having the time of their life hitting the ball with every thing they had.

This could be the right time to pass on a helpful pro tip so often written concerning such an attack on the ball.

Time and time again people are told that the golf swing is a relaxed movement culminating with a firm hit at impact. Yet how often, even vetern golfers, do we ignore such advice by endeavouring to over power the ball with such disasterous results.

The mechanics of hitting a golf ball are not dissimular to the act of banging a nail with a hammer. Coming down with the hammer you do not suddenly jerk your head away from your target, and so should it be with the golf hit. Concentrate on the ball which you can imagine is the nail and then hit with the clubhead which you can imagine is the hammer.

Considering their short time at the game we have some very fine Junior golfers with swings that under proper control would improve their game immensely.

Watching these kids swing with their fluid classic finish can assist the beginner visualize the proper swing the moment before the golf shot.

Sam Snead once said that one should holdback fifteen percent, and swing with eighty percent of his strength.

Holding back on this fifteen percent will go a long way in obtaining that control so essential in golf.

Two Romans were playing golf. One of the yelled "IV"!
