Jeffrey is eight months old of Czechoslovakian and Scottish descent. He needs to be adopted so he will grow up as a member of a family. He is fine-boned but sturdy, with dark hazel eyes, fine brown hair and light olive skin with rosy cheeks. He has no teeth yet, but that searching finger in his mouth suggests they are close. He is a happy, active, good-natured little boy who loves to be with people, so it is hoped he will be adopted into a family where he will have brothers and sisters. Jeffrey is such an appealing, cuddly baby he is perhaps a little spoiled. There is diabetes in his background, but he is in excellent health. He needs warm, demonstrative parents who will not worry over his medical history. To inquire about adopting Jeffrey please write to Today's Child, Department of Social and Family Services, Parliament Buildings, Toronto 182. For general information about adoption ask your local Children's Aid Society.
