value of wholesale testing, let's take a look at the Guthrie blood test for phenylketonuria, a rare genetic disease which if not detected in the first few weeks of life can cause severe mental retardation in a newborn. A worldwide study in 1960 determined that 99.6 per cent of all known cases of untreated PKU resulted in mental retardation.

Dr. Jean Webb, chief of the maternal and child health service, special health services branch, Ontario Department of Health, has provided us with interesting statistics which prove that mass PKU screening saves money - as well as lives and anguish.

Taxpayers were spared an estimated seven million dollar bill in one three-year period alone, according to Ontario Department of Health statistics. During that span, which began in 1966, 357,924 Guthrie tests were performed and 28 newborns were
