AMENDMENT MAKES CERTAIN LOTTERIES LEGAL

- From Consumer Information Digest

Certain lotteries and games of chance are now legal in Ontario as a result of amendments to the Criminal Code of Canada.

The Ontario Department of Financial and Commercial Affairs has established a Lotteries Branch, to supervise the procedures, rules and forms for the licencing and regulation of lotteries in the province.

Lottery licences are granted by municipalities to religious and charitable organizations in their districts, and by the Lotteries Branch to carnival operators at fall fairs and exhibitions, and at public places of amusement.

A municipality may grant a lottery licence to a religious or charitable organization if the total value of all prizes at a single lottery does not exceed $3,500. For lotteries of higher stakes, a provincial license must be obtained and the application approved by both the municipality and the Lotteries Branch.

Religious and charitable organizations each obtain an application form for a licence to stage a lottery from the Lottery Licencing Officer of the Municipality (usually the Town Clerk). In the case of lotteries or games of chance to be conducted at fall fairs or exhibitions or at public places of amusement, application must be made to the Lotteries Branch, Ont.
