Leconte's Sparrow

Sharp-tailed Sparrow

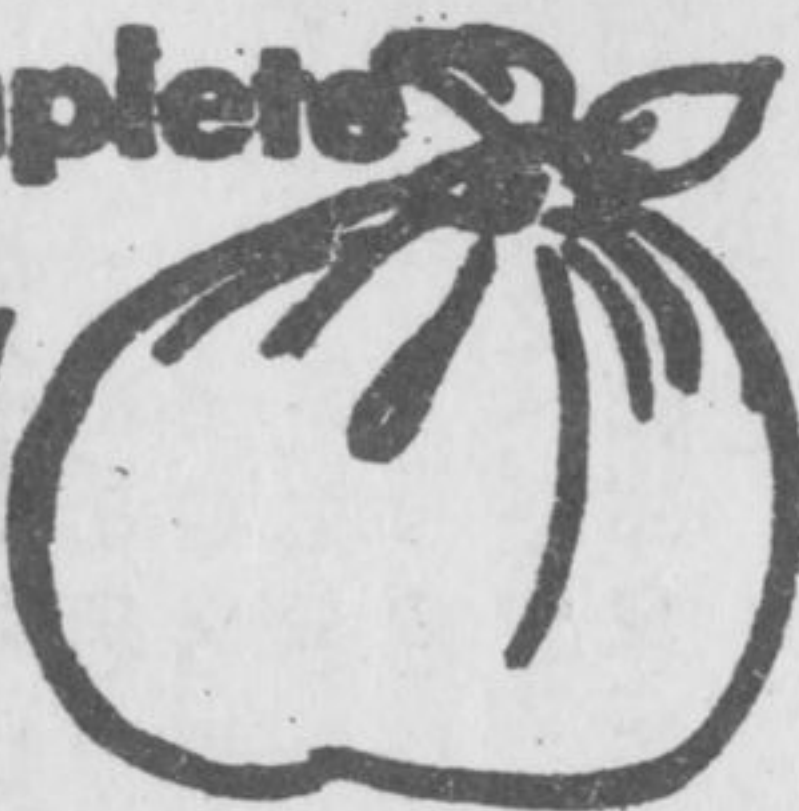

WETLAND SPARROWS

Two small, elusive sparrows are found in the wet grass and sedge areas around marshes. Leconte's likes the dense long grass habitat of the outer edge while the sharp-tailed sparrow prefers grass and sedges in an inch or two of water. Nests are on the ground or just above water. Both sparrows are dark brown, with streaked backs, buffy underparts and a bold face pattern. Leconte's has a bright, almost orange face with a greyish cheek patch, the sharp-tailed has a similar head pattern but colors duller, it has heavier streaking on the underparts.
