TODAY'S CHILD

BY HELEN ALLEN

THE TORONTO SUN SYNDICATE

LOVES HIS BIKE

David is nine. An engaging-looking boy with brown eyes, brown hair and medium complexion. His background is Anglo-Saxon.

This youngster's health is good but he is small for his age, which is beginning to worry him. Circumstances in his life have contributed to a lack of self-confidence, and the recent discovery that he has a perceptual handicap seemed to be an added blow. However, a corrective program is being recommended which should help David in handling his school work and thus help his self-esteem.

David enjoys riding his bike and he loves working with his hands. In this area he feels competent and he tackles mechanical things with enthusiasm. He is fascinated by anything to do with aircraft — small engine model planes, real planes in the sky and on the ground. He has never seen a large airport and is looking forward to a promised visit to a really big one where he can watch the jets.

Basically, David is a friendly, trusting, affectionate child, curious and interested in things and with a good sense of humor. He needs a family who will love him for himself and value him for his many assets. Warm, mature, understanding parents will find him a rewarding son. David would probably be best as the youngest or the only child.

To inquire about adopting David, please write to Today's Child, Box 888, Station K, Toronto. For general adoption information, write your Children's Aid Society.
