A Glow-in-the-Dark toilet seat. Electrically warmed butter knife. A loose-fitting brimmed hat worn by women to conceal curlers when they go shopping. Photo-electric cells in eyeglasses which activate a buzzer when wearer's eyelids fail to blink often enough, preventing vehicle operators from falling asleep. Dietetic dog food for the unexercised city pet. A mirrored bathroom scale to give dieters a new self-image. For guys like me... an electric typewriter that turns on writers. Break-apart TV dinners... green vegetable sections heated later to prevent overcooking, salads and desserts simply thawed. A revolving goldfish bowl for tired goldfish. A battery-operated beard vacuum cleaner. A moustache lifter for teeth brushing or soup drinking.

An what did you get for Christmas?

Regardless whether you had a White Christmas or not, bet all your gifts and booze shopping put a good dent in your pocketbook, maybe even leaving many of you in the red.

In Indianapolis just a few days before Christmas, a so-called toy clerk in a departmental store turned out to be a thief. A nine-year-old boy, who had been given $20 by his father to purchase a gift, walked up to a man in the store. He presented the man $20 and the gift of his choice. The man took the item and the money and promised to return shortly with the item gift-wrapped and a receipt. Neither the money nor the 'clerk' were seen again.

This might be late advice for Christmas shoppers, but for those who forgot a certain someone, here's a little tip on sending boxes by mail. Dampen the cord before it is tied around the parcel. When it dries it shrinks and holds the paper tightly bound. Put cellophane tape over the address on the parcel so there is no danger of the name and address being blurred from the effects of stormy weather. And for belated Christmas cards, or birthday cards, etc., here's how you can save your tongue for tastier use. Dampen the stamps by passing them over an ice cube which you have set in a shallow dish or saucer. Should have told you about this before Christmas, I guess. Oh well...
