was saved for him, and, with a framed Chimo insignia presented to him at the party.

Reeve Harold McParland, who with his wife were guests at the party, spoke informally of the town's interest in the new association pledging the council's support in every possible way.

Among the many draw prizes were two specially-donated ones - a hair cut for a man, won by Wes Miller and Harold Milks and a lady's hair-do won by Eva Haughn and Bern Whent.

A buffet lunch ended the evening.

In a sense it is an awesome thing being a trustee. One has a legal responsibility for ones own hospital and the quality of care provided for those admitted. One also has a duty to govern well on behalf of the community and the tax payers in general. There are Hospital By-Laws and the Public Hospital Act to become familiar with. There are conference reports to read, governmental committee research to study and many other phases of hospital management to understand. There will be committee, executive and Board meetings to attend and many tasks to perform. But if one has a keen interest in the hospital, abundant energy and time to fulfill ones assignments all these responsibilities are not beyond the grasp of the ordinary citizen. To be adequate for the role of hospital governor, anyone with dedication, determination and good sound judgment should consider the possibility of running for election.

It is a simple procedure. Firstly, the interested person must be a current member of the Hospital Corporation with voting privileges; secondly, choose another member of the Corporation who is willing to nominate the aspiring governor and then see that the candidate is properly introduced to the electors. The electors do the rest and the new governor, no matter how capable, finds himself in the midst of a thorough learning process.

The Hospital Board has set up a nominating committee, but expects keen community participation and nominations of candidates from the members at large during the election to be held at the annual meeting.
