HISTORICAL AND NATURAL HERITAGE SCHOLARSHIPS ANNOUNCED

Graduate university students interested in Canada's historical and natural heritage will have the opportunity to further those interests through special Parks Canada scholarships Jean Chretien, Minister of Indian and Northern Affairs, announced.

Up to fifteen scholarships, valued at $2,000 each, will be awarded for study in the fields of natural parks and outdoor recreation; and historical archaeology and restoration architecture.

As Canada's National and Historic Park systems expand to meet the ever-increasing demands put upon them, a growing need has developed for men and women with both an interest and an expertise in this country's historical and natural heritage.

The scholarship program, which began in 1967, is designed to encourage students towards careers in the management, interpretation and development of National and Historic Parks

The program has been extended this year to include archaeology and architecture with the already present fields of park management, park planning, resource conservation and outdoor recreation.

The scholarships are available only to Canadian citizens and are tenable at foreign universities, only if the required courses are not offered here in Canada.

Applications for the 1973-74 grants must be received by May 15, 1973 and holders may not accept awards from other federal government sources.
