FALL FAIR

Although the Fall Fair, sponsored annually by St. Andrew's United Church, was again financially successful, the crowd attending almost the same in numbers, with the usual out of town visitors including interested tourists, present, the general atmosphere was dampened somehow, by the railway strike, even though purse strings were not tightened.

In addition to the auction, there were the usual displays of garden produce, home baking, a white elephant counter and a penny auction. The Kinsmen again had their booth with no wares to sell, but showing original advertisements of the many projects to which they contribute in the town and to McCausland Hospital, with a free draw, and the Association for the Mentally Retarded had their display counter.
