TODAY'S CHILD

BY HELEN ALLEN

THE TORONTO SUN SYNDICATE

Johnny will soon be 11 but seems considerably younger both physically and mentally.

He is an appealing youngster, partly because of his small size, partly his friendly manner and partly his sensitiveness to what is happening around him.

Johnny is extremely slim and small-boned and doctors say his bone development is delayed by about two years. He is in a special class for below average children and will continue to need special education, but he is doing well in school for a child with his limited abilities.

Generally in good health, Johnny has a functional heart murmur. This is not felt to be a sign of heart disease, but he may need periodic check-ups. He wears glasses for near-sightedness and will soon need orthodontic treatment. Because of poor muscle control he has trouble with pencils and crayons, doing better in oral work.

Johnny's foster home is on a farm where he enjoys the outdoors and is interested in all the farm activities. He is fairly active.

Johnny needs warm, flexible parents who will appreciate his outgoing, responsive personality and who will not expect academic achievement.

To inquire about adopting Johnny, please write to Today's Child, Box 888, Station K, Toronto M4P 2H2. For general adoption information, please contact your local Children's Aid Society.
