

Sports Slants - continued

Turning to football, Canadian football that is, they're now talking of a CFL-NFL all-star game by 1975 - in Mexico City. If such a game materializes, it would be a combined effort of the player associations in each league. Players' contracts stipulate that a CFL-NFL all-star game held in Canada or the U.S. would require the consent of club owners. Since both leagues feel the club owners won't go for such a game, they want to give it a crack in Mexico City, where it's out of the owners' jurisdiction.

The NFL had an exhibition game in Mexico City a while ago, and 85,000 fans showed up. Now they feel an all-star game involving two countries could draw as many as 115,000 fans.

Sounds good! Ole
