had IO seasons with 20 goals or more. During his 20-year career, he performed II seasons with New York Rangers, during which time he had four 20-goals-plus seasons. Then in 1963-64, his first full season with Boston, he scored 23. Then it was on to Detroit, where he had a 23-goal year in I966-67. From Detroit he went to Pittsburgh and in two years with the Penguins scored 26 and 21 goals in '69-70 - '70-7I, respectively. Pittsburgh sold him to Minnesota after the '71 seasons and Dean went on to score 20 and 26 in his two seasons as a North Star.

Brilliant careers indeed, for both men !! And Steady Eddie Shack is still giving opposing teams fits ....

The NHL and the WHA made peace recently (if you want to call it that) by agreeing to play a series of exhibition games prior to the start of next season. But if you check the proposed schedule of games between the two leagues, six of the NHL teams won't be part of it. Toronto Maple Leafs, New York Rangers and Detroit Red Wings are the only three establish -ed clubs who have agreed to play against WHA teams, and in a sense you can't count the Leafs, since they are owned by Harold Ballard, who is a friend of John Bassett, who owns the WHA Toros. You'll notice that Montreal, Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia -- probably the most established clubs, currently, in the NHL, don't plan to play exhibitions against WHA teams. And neither do Buffalo Sabres and Los Angeles Kings ....

Any idea what major league baseball umpires make, salary-wise? Not all that much when you consider all the crap they sometimes have to take. The umps recently accepted a new threeyear contract that calls for annual pay raises, better expense allowances, etc. The pay raises boost the starting salary from $12,500 a season to $14,000, increasing to $15,500 in 1976. Minimum for five-year umps, meanwhile, goes up to $21,000 from $18,000 this year, and to $24,500 in two years. Ten-year umpires will make $26,000 beginning this year and $28,500 in 1976. The true veterans, the guys who have been around 20 years or more, will make $35,000 this year and $37,500 in 1976. Those chosen to officiate World Series games will make $8,500 this year, $9,000 next year and $9,500 1976. Come to think of it, that's not bad money ..

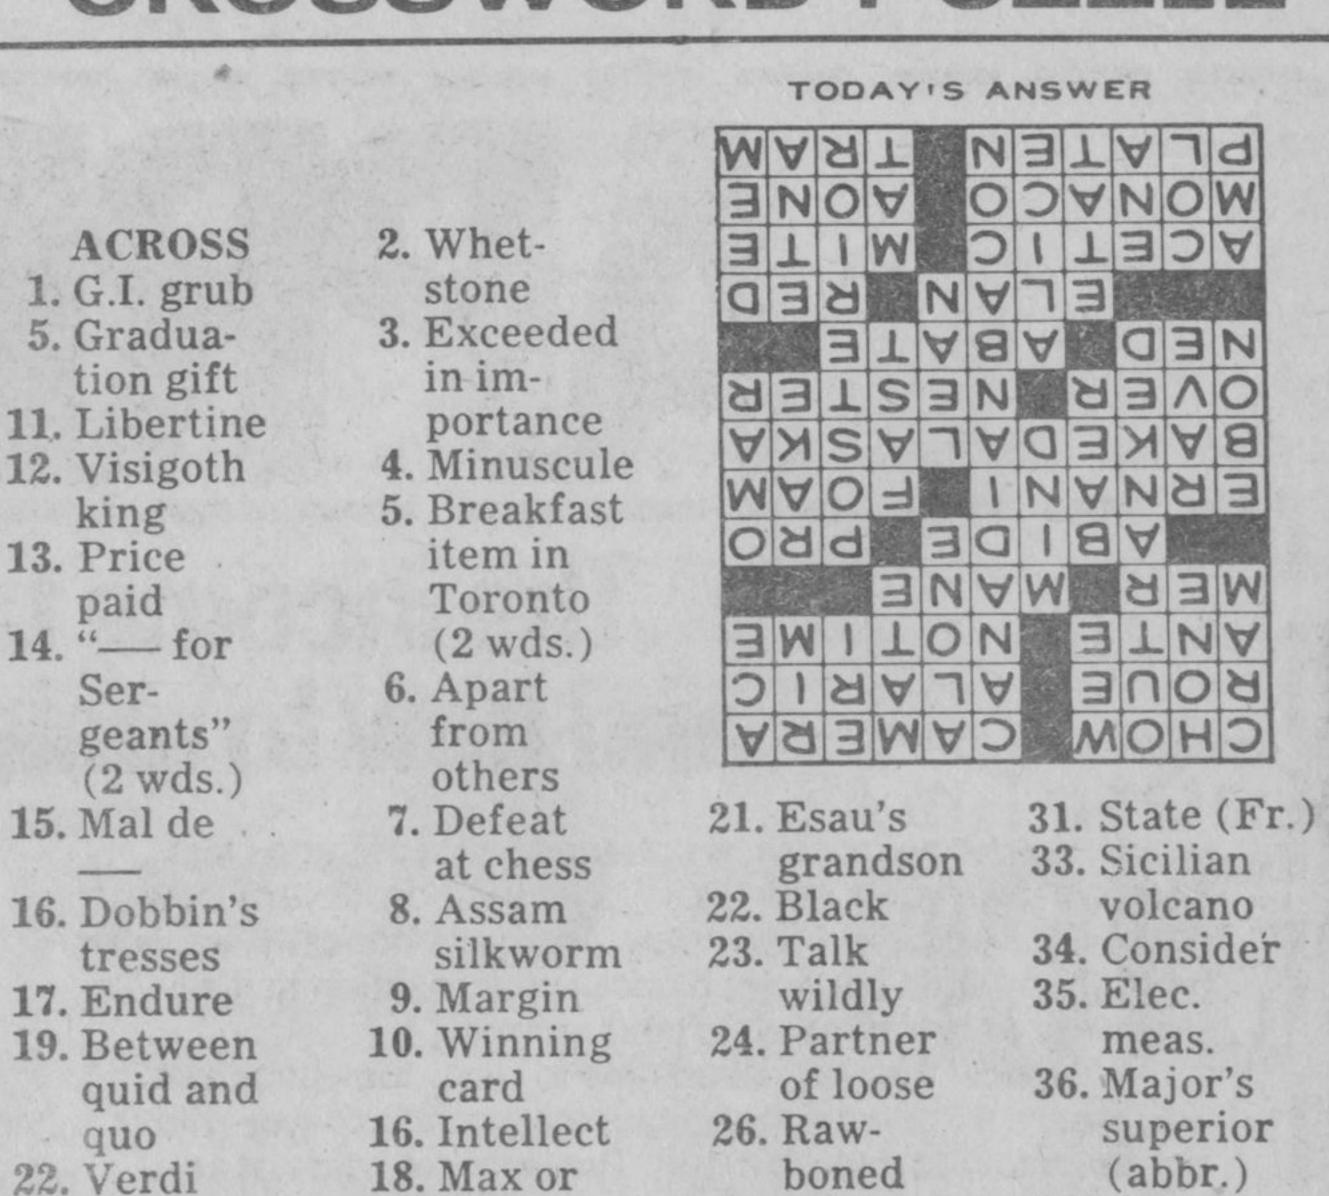

Ralph Goldston, former defensive halfback with Hamilton Tiger-Cats and later an assistant coach with Montreal Alouettes - and more recently an assistant coach at University of Colorado, -- has been named the first black pro football coach. Goldston, who had some fine years with the Ticats, will coach the Houston entry in the new World Football League. The Houston WFL entry was originally scheduled to play in New York, but has apparently been purchased by a rich, 30-year-old Houston accountant, John Rooney.
