It's time to ask ourselves if all this government is necessary. We need a critical examination of all government programs to weed out duplication and waste. We need a performance analysis of bureaucrats on the job. We might find a third of them are necessary. Bee-fing up the Auditor General's powers and his staff would be a good way to start.

Now, Prime Minister Trudeau tells us, it wouldn't be fair for senior civil servants to be limited to the $2,400 maximum pay raise proposed for other civil servants as a

Everyone wants to earn more, but real increases in wages require increases in productivity. If an employer can't afford to pay the wages of a more efficient competitor and goes out of business, no one will mourn his passing. But when the pace for higher pay is being set by the less productive civil service, then the viability of all business is threatened.

While on the subject of productivity, it is interesting to note that there are about 400,000 more people drawing unemployment insurance payments than there are unemployed.
