Pat was at the nursing station there. A nurse carries out many of the duties normally done by a Doctor, and have to decide whether the patient should be sent by plane to Inuvik to see a Doctor. The other nurse and Pat delivered a baby while Beth was there.

When Beth left Pat was expecting a transfer. Beth enjoyed seeing the places in Terrace Bay that Pat had told her about.

When she left here by bus, she was headed for Niagara Falls and hoped to meet a boy from home, who was nearing the end of his travels and would be able to take news home to her parents.

Although a pre arranged meeting wasn't planned, they did see each other in Niagara.

She planned to be in Nova Scotia the later part of August as their Department of Education was the only province willing to honour her teaching experience and gave her some hope of being able to experience teaching in their school system, to gain new ideas to take home to her classroom.

She was a good ambassador for Australia.
